FISHING STEAMER IS SUNK

A fishing steamer was run down and sunk off Monomoy Point, Cape Cod, early today. Whether or not the crew of thirty men were drowned cannot be learned.

A lobster fisherman discovered the masts of the steamer sticking out of the water. The fog was very thick. It is believed that the steamer was run down during the night.

The point where the steamer lies is Stone Horse shoal. A heavy swell was running today and with the thick fog hanging over the water nothing could be done in the way of searching for members of the crew, who might have escaped from their sinking vessel in the small boats.

The steamer which was run down is part of a fleet of porgy steamers, and they are equipped with two big seine boats each. These are towed so that it is possible that the crews escaped by jumping into these boats. Fishermen at Monomoy believe that if the steamer was run down and sunk it would have been possible for a few of the crew to make their escape from the sinking steamer in the seine boats.

The lifesavers at Monomoy Point kept a double watch in order to go to the aid of the men if they were signted.

ORDER NOT GUILTY VERDICT FOR EIGHT MORE STRIKERS

Judge Dana, presiding in the criminal session of the Superior Court, today ordered verdicts of not guilty returned against eight Elevated strikers who were to be tried on various charges.

This action on the part of the court was taken because the government did not present any evidence. James Herold a striking conductor, was found not guilty on a charge of pulling down a trolley rope on a car on Tremont street, June 7.

The jury in the case of Leonard Kane, an Elevated striker charged with hurling a missile at a car, reported a disagreement after being out eight hours. Those who were freed today by Judge Dana are: Bernard F. Welch, William G. Benson, William J. Miller, Fred J. Rice, Joe Schwartz, Thomas J. Crowley, John Bains and Peter Flynn. They were all found guilty in the lower courts on minor charges and either fined or given jail sentences.

CALL DISGUISED GIRL A BURGLAR

Charged with being a burglar, Mary Brading, twenty-five years old, was arrested by the Boston police after she had disguised herself in men's clothing and escaped down a fire escape. The young woman was arrested when walking in male attire in the West End.

When arraigned the young woman, who appeared unconcerned about her fate, pleaded not guilty and had her case continued until August 26. She could not furnish bail of $2,400 and was taken to the Charles street jail.

Two officers from the Joy street police station, armed with a warrant called at No. 20 Hancock street to arrest her. She was charged with entering the rooms of Rodney McDonald, David Sieffer and Harry Fine, from which clothing to the value of $100 was stolen.

As the two officers entered the front door the young woman left the house by way of the fire escape.

BIG TRAWLER GOES ASHORE

The big steam trawler Heroine of Boston, that in the Civil War days was one of the fastest of the blockade runners, ran ashore in the fog off Baker's Island, near Salem, at 4:30 a. m. to day. She floated off with the tide with the loss of her propeller. A tug was sent for from Boston and she started back for Boston under tow shortly after 8 o'clock.

The Heroine was coming in from Georges Bank with a full fare of fish. The weather was thick. Threading his way in cautiously, the skipper suddenly heard almost read ahead the monotonous boom of the Baker's Island fog horn. He rang the bell for reverse but it was too late. With a slow, grind the big trawler poked her nose on the shelving beach of the island and refused to budge.

MRS. C. H. MACKAY PAINFULLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

STOCKBRIDGE, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Mackay, prominent New York society woman and suffrage leader, was flung out of her automobile this afternoon on the steep slope of Monument mountain and was painfully bruised. She was carried to her country mansion, Glen Burnie, where she was attended by a physician. It was said she had escaped serious injury.

Mrs. Mackay was at the wheel and the chauffeur was at her side. The car skidded, crashed against a pile of rocks and overturned. Both Mrs. Mackay and the chauffeur were thrown clear out of the machine. They were picked up by passing tourists and carried home.

OFFICERS OF BOTH CRAFT EXONERATED IN ROCKLAND CRASH

Officers of the Eastern Steamship Company's steamer City of Rockland and of the steam collier William Chisholm, which collided on the early morning of July 30 off Thatcher's Island, are exonerated of all blame for the collision in the report made public today by Supervising Inspector of Steamboats John B. Sloan of Boston. The report is the result of the probe into the collision by local inspector of hulls, Captain John F. Blair, and local inspector of boilers, Andrew J. Savage.

The report recommends that some special commendation be given Captain Herbert C. Colbeon of the steam collier for his good work in rescuing and caring for the 350 passengers taken from the City of Rockland.

MALDEN CAR AND ICE CART CRASH

Twenty passengers, mostly women, were shaken up today when an inbound surface car speeding along Lebanon street, Malden, collided with a heavy ice team. One of the horses attached to the ice wagon was killed and the second one badly injured. Several windows in the car were smashed and the car so badly damaged that the passengers were transferred to another.

The surface car was one of the heavy semi-convertible type. It was going to a good rate of speed down Lebanon road to the Elevated. The ice wagon, driven by E. F. Stillman, turned into Lebanon street from a side street directly in front of the car. Stillman was uninjured. None of the passengers was injured.

MAJOR RAY GIVEN PROMOTION BY TAFT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—President Taft today sent to the Senate the nomination of Major B. B. Ray to be deputy paymaster-general, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

BACK BAY LAND SOLD FOR GARAGE

Charles H. Taylor today transferred to the Fenway Garage Company 67,327 feet of land on Lansdowne and Ipswich streets. A big fireproof service station is to be built.

HORSFALL CHAUFFEUR IS FREED

Ingraham Mercier, chauffeur for James H. Horsfall of Lowell, was freed today in the Fourth District Court at Woburn by Judge Edward F. Johnson of a charge of assault and battery in causing the death of five-year-old Rose May Pearille at North Woburn two weeks ago. There was no evidence offered to show that Mercier was driving recklessly, and the judge, after hearing various versions of the affair, ordered Mercier discharged.

Mercier, while driving Horsfall's car, on August 6, struck and killed the child as she was playing in the street. He was placed under arrest charged with assault and battery. Joseph Bevgin, a barber, testified today that Mercier was not driving recklessly.

Little Patrick Martini, who was playing with the little girl when she was killed, breathlessly told his story of the killing. He said that he was playing with his dog in company with several other children. Little Rose was among them. Suddenly the little girl darted out into the street and, a moment later he heard the child scream.

The boy did not see the auto. When he looked up Mercier and Horsfall were standing in the road by the child's body.

Horsfall and his death auto have figured prominently in the automobile records of injuries and deaths. Horsfall is now out on bail having taken exceptions to a sentence of six months' imprisonment on a charge of manslaughter for the killing of a Mrs. Ruth Kittredge, a seventy-four-year-old woman, at Wilmington, with his auto. Horsfall was riding in the car with Mercier when the Pearille child was killed.

BOSTON MAN ENDS LIFE AT MEREDITH

MEREDITH, N. H., Aug. 23.—The body of an unidentified man, who came here from Boston today and who is believed to have killed himself, was found lying beside the railroad tracks by John Gainard of Chester avenue, Chelsea. Beside the body was a revolver purchased by the dead man by a local store, along with a box of cartridges. The dead man was about twenty-five years old, smooth face, five feet two inches tall and very frail, not weighing over 120 pounds. He wore a black derby hat, blue serge suit, black shoes, and had a gold watch and chain.

BOLTS HIT COTTAGES ALONG SOUTH SHORE

A thunder storm, accompanied by lightning swept the South Shore shortly after 2 p. m. today. Several cottages near Nantasket were struck by lightning. The home of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Clark at Allerton was struck by a bolt which entered the chimney and toppled the bricks to the ground. The rain poured down in torrents for twenty minutes. In Boston and along the North Shore rain fell for five minutes and then the sun returned.

AUTO RACER GETS 4 MONTHS IN JAIL

James D. Motherway, twenty-six years old, of No. 122 Pembroke street, South End, owner and driver of an automobile which overturned on Huntington avenue, Roxbury, the night of August 2, when the police were pursuing it, was sentenced to four months in jail by Judge Nathan Williams in the Roxbury District Court today, despite counsel's appeal for clemency.

CAPTURE DEATH SUSPECT ON BOAT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 23.—Luigi Melinazzo, who says he lives in Waltham, Mass., was arrested here today aboard the steamship Madonna by Massachusetts State police. They charge Melinazzo with the murder of Antoni Loudo in Waltham on August 11. Melinazzo was bound for Naples. He went to Boston with the officers.

ARCHBOLD, OIL TRUST PAYMASTER

This is the man who, before a U. S. Senate Committee today, admitted that he paid over $125,000 in cold cash, in behalf of the Standard Oil Company, to Bliss and Penrose for use in the Republican national campaign of 1904.

ARCHBOLD'S AMAZING "CASH" CONFESSION

"What contributions did you make directly for the Standard Oil Company to the Republican campaign?"

"I made two; one through Mr. Bliss of $100,000, and one through Senator Penrose of $25,000."

"You made it by check?"

"No, I think I made it in currency."

"What was the denomination of the bills with which the $100,000 was paid?"

"They were $1,000 and $500 bills."

"I had conferences with no one save Mr. Bliss. I talked very frankly with him and explained to him that, while we were desirous of making this contribution, we did not desire to make it unless it would be approved and appreciated by the powers that be. Bliss smilingly assured me that I need have no apprehension on that score."

—From John D. Archbold's testimony before Senate investigating committee today.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—John D. Archbold, directing genius of the Standard Oil Company, today before the United States Senate sub-committee investigating campaign contributions of 1904 and 1908, confirmed the statement of Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania that the $25,000 given to the Keystone State Senator by the Standard Oil representative in 1904 was for the Pennsylvania campaign.

ARCHBOLD TELLS OF $125,000 CONTRIBUTIONS.

Archbold also corroborated the Senator's statement that the Standard Oil contributed $100,000 to the national Republican committee for the Roosevelt campaign that year.

Senator Penrose, although not a member of the committee, was prominent during the hearing and seemed to regard it as his own personal affair, making many suggestions and at one time almost clashing with Senator Clapp because the Minnesota Senator refused to let a picture be taken of the committee which Penrose urged be permitted.

Statements fell from Archbold's lips that were so startling in character as to hold his auditors spellbound. Never before had assertions of direct connection between "big business" and a national party been publicly made by so commanding a figure in the financial world as Mr. Archbold.

Archbold told the committee that he was acquainted with Cornelius N. Bliss, who was the treasurer of the National Republican Committee, but that he did not know Cortelyou until later.

"What contributions did you make directly for the Standard Oil Company to the Republican campaign," asked Senator Clapp.

"I made two one through Mr. Bliss of $100,000, and one through Senator Penrose of $25,000," answered Mr. Archbold.

"Do you know when the $100,000 contribution was made?"

"From the best recollection I have, it was sometime in September, 1904, perhaps not later than the middle of September."

"You made it by check, I presume?"

Gift Was in Currency.

"No, I think I made it in currency."

"Was there any one present beside yourself and Mr. Bliss?"

"To the best of my recollection I was alone in my office at No. 26 Broadway."

"Have you any written data that would fix the date?"

"Mr. Bliss sent me a receipt, but to such an investigation as I have been able to make I have not found it, but I hope to find it."

"If you subsequently find the receipt, will you send it to the committee?"

"I will."

"Did you have any previous talk with Mr. Bliss before you made this contribution?" asked Senator Clapp.

Rogers Might Have Been Present.

"I had, either at my office or at Mr. H. H. Rogers' office. My impression is that very early in September Mr. Bliss came to see me and I told him we would have to submit the matter to the board," answered Mr. Archbold.

"Mr. Rogers was also at that time an officer of the Standard Oil?"

"He was. He is now dead. He died in 1909."

Archbold stated that there had been no witnesses that he knew of to his conve-

CLINTON MAN SHOT IN SALOON

CLINTON, Aug. 23.—William Durkin, sixty-eight, a stable hand, was shot and killed today in W. O'Malley's saloon on Oak street by Martin O'Malley, forty-five, a bartender employed in the Crossman House. The men had been together most of the morning talking in the Crossman House when they came into O'Malley's saloon.

In the course of conversation with Durkin, O'Malley pulled out a revolver. He grasped it in his right hand, and in doing so it exploded. The bullet struck Durkin's left hand and passed through a part of his body and then fell to the floor. He died in a few minutes. O'Malley was arrested.

It is generally believed that the shooting was accidental.

POLICE DROP CHARGE OF AUTO STEALING

The charge against W. F. Dickson of No. 73 Warren avenue, Boston, of stealing an automobile from a person unknown was dismissed in Cambridge District Court today. The police said they did not care to prosecute, why they did not explain. Dickson is a chauffeur. He ran an automobile into a Cambridge yard a week ago and left the car there, saying it was disabled. He returned for it, but the occupant of the premises had notified the police, who charged Dickson with stealing the machine.

FATHER PATTERN TO NEW MIKADO

TOKIO, Aug. 23.—Yoshihito, the new Emperor of Japan, completed today the formalities connected with his accession to the throne. The concluding function was the reading by the Premier of a special imperial edict, which said:

"I have ascended the throne of my imperial ancestors, and expect to follow in the footsteps of the late Emperor, obeying the guidance of my ancestors."

KID M'COY CASE UPSETS BELGIANS

BRUSSELS, Aug. 23.—If "Kid" McCoy will come here and press his charge, high officials of the Belgian police said today they would investigate the accusation he is quoted of making in London that a lawyer purporting to represent the Ostend authorities told him a $50,000 payment would insure abandonment of the extradition proceedings against him growing out of a jewel theft from the Princess of Thurn and Taxis.

Belgian officialdom is much perturbed by the outcome of the case.

MAY INDICT FOUR N. Y. INSPECTORS

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—When the Grand Jury, which is probing into graft in the Police Department revealed by the assassination of Herman Rosenthal, reassembles on Sept. 1, sensational evidence is expected to be presented concerning the recent financial operations of a police inspector and a high civilian employe of the department. This announcement was made today at District-Attorney Whitman's office, where preparations are under way for a resumption of the inquiry.

It was also learned at Mr. Whitman's office that a subpoena had been issued for a banker, whose testimony will throw light upon the bank account of this employe in the department.

Evidence already in Mr. Whitman's hands, it is believed, will probably cause the indictment of this man, and the police inspector named in connection with him. Three other inspectors may be involved, and there is a possibility that all three may be indicted.

Within the past four months the civilian in question rented a safe deposit box and started a bank account, although his salary is known to be moderate.

About the same time that the civilian rented a safe deposit box, the inspector also rented one. At the same time the inspector opened a new bank account. Prosperity was coming his way.

The inspector and the civilian employe have long been close friends and next neighbors, it is said, and have been seen together frequently. Their cases will not only be the text board by the Grand Jury when it resumes its graft inquiry, but will figure prominently in the John Doe proceedings before Justice Goff beginning in the Supreme Court September 3.

Attaches of the District Attorney's office are investigating what is believed to have been an attempt to steal evidence of graft, by breaking in the police department, by breaking into the home of William Flynn, chief of the Eastern division of the United States Secret Service.

Flynn, who has been allowed to resign temporarily in order to investigate graft in the metropolis, was out of the city when his home at 125th and Wadsworth avenue was entered and desks and closets searched. It is known that Flynn has important evidence against police officials. At the present time Flynn is on his vacation.

TAFT'S FAITH 'HILLES' TOPIC

By CHARLES D. HILLES,
Chairman Republican National Committee.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—President Taft is a Unitarian and attends regularly All Souls' Unitarian Church in Washington.

Mrs. Taft is and always has been an Episcopalian. She is a member and a regular attendant of St. John's Episcopal Church in Washington, popularly known as "The Church of the Presidents" because so many of the nation's Chief Executives have attended it. It seems almost trite to state such well known facts as these, but it also seems necessary to do so because of an underhanded campaign against the President which is being carried on in certain parts of the country, going so far in their perversion of the facts as to assert that Mrs. Taft is a Roman Catholic.

In this same connection I wish to brand as absolutely false the statement being circulated in the same quarter that President Taft sent Major Butt to the Vatican to procure from the Pope the support of the Catholics in this country, the statement that Mr. Taft has attended Catholic services for political purposes, and the further statement that the President has been unduly favorable to Catholics. Every one of these statements is not only false, but wholly without foundation.

President Taft is a just man, and, being a just man, he has been perfectly just to Catholics, precisely as he has been to every other denomination.

President Taft's whole course in the White House, in the Cabinet and in the Philippines has been guided by an intense desire to live up to his conception of a just man and in the White House to be President of all the people, North and South, East and West, Protestant and Catholic, religious and non-religious. In the Philippines he was called upon to conduct many negotiations with the Catholic Church beginning with the time he was sent to Rome by President McKinley to induce the Pope to compel the friars, or monks, in the Philippines to part with their immense land holdings at a reasonable price.

There are probably few Americans who realize the magnitude of the undertaking which President McKinley confided to President Taft.

But President Taft achieved it with such infinite tact that he made no enemies at Rome, and yet perfected a bargain which, even from the standpoint of Yankee shrewdness, must be pronounced a good one.

DIXON ATTACKS PARTY LOYALTY

By SENATOR J. M. DIXON.
Chairman Progressive National Committee.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—In his classic "American Commonwealth," Mr. Bryce speaks of our subserviency as a people to party authority as greater than exists in any other democratic country and as altogether inexplicable. It has been piloted out by other learned and friendly students of our institutions that this slavish obedience to party is the root of many of our most persistent national ills.

From it has grown the "boss" system and the whole extra-constitutional method of nominating candidates for elective office. As a result we have drifted far away from the Constitution in this regard and have substituted methods and practises not contemplated by the Constitution and directly contrary to its provisions.

The idea of party loyalty has become a dogma preaching with a fervor and stupidity that amount to bigotry. The party may sweep a Presidential nomination from the people and bestow it upon a candidate repudiated by the rank and file of the party, but it is still "the Grand Old Party." Its leaders may be shown in corrupt alliance with crooked business, working in defence of abuses and against the redress of crying evils; but look at its long record of honorable achievement in the past and the great names which adorn its history and get into line.

Obedience to party may involve supporting men and practices which you detest, but you will have the consolation that you are "regular."

This idea is as degrading as all superstitions, and until its hold upon the members of the Republican and Democratic parties is broken, we can hardly consider ourselves a self-governing people and worthy of free institutions.

The Progressive party submits its program to the conscience and the patriotism of the independent voters. It bids them step clear from the ancient and rusty shackles of party, which in fact are broken, and only intimidate without being strong enough to bind or hold.

If showing no longer be true, as was once said of the American people, that they fear the dead lions of secession and slavery more than the live dogs of political corruption.

POLITICAL NOTES

Congressmen Gillett of Springfield, Wilder of Gardner, Harris of Bridgewater, Roberts of Chelsea and Gardner of Hamilton have no opposition for the Republican nomination in their respective districts. On the Democratic end Congressman John A. Thayer has no opposition in the new Worcester district, but with the exception of two candidate for Congress two years ago, the sixteen districts of the State abound in all sorts of struggles. William G. McNeelnie, who came near to being elected from Springfield, and Thomas C. Thacher of the Cape, who lost out by only 64 votes, are interested. In the remaining districts the Democratic contests are not only many, but fruitful of bitter fights.

Henry J. Sheffiann of Revere is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Ninth District. This is no longer the "Old Guard" represented by Collins, O'Neil, Fitzgerald and now Murray, but a district which has Revere, Somerville, Everett, Chelsea and nearby territory. Sheffiann invented the "flying wedge" that swept Douglas into the chair as Governor, was appointed to the Harbor and Land Commission afterward, but became lost until now in political publicity. His opponents for the Democratic nomination are ex-Mayor Thomas J. Boynton of Everett and Henry C. Rowland of Somerville. Tufts is the district in which Congressman Ernest W. Roberts of Chelsea has an uncontested Republican nomination.

The Bull Moose movement in New England is scaring Republican regulars almost to death. In every New England State the Moosers have organized—and a sturdy, independent crowd, too, they are. To the Moosers it would be better to have Wilson elected than Taft, though they still pin their faith on a Roosevelt victory. In all the New England States the Moosers are showing about all the activity so far disclosed in Republican circles. The old-line stand-pat Republicans seem to be in a trance.

* * *

Wilson is coming to Massachusetts and Maine. Roosevelt is to invade Vermont and so is Bryan. Governor Marshall and Speaker Clark are going to have something to say in Massachusetts, Vermont and Maine, and Senator Gorman of New York is coming to New England also. Seems as if New England were not at all the "office fazer" campaigners a few years ago described.

* * *

Governor Bass of New Hampshire, one of the original "eight Governors" that brought Roosevelt out as a candidate, says that he not only believes that Roosevelt will carry New Hampshire, but that west of the Mississippi he will make a clean sweep. At the Rockingham Fair yesterday, the young Progressive Governor of New Hampshire was confident of Roosevelt's election.

"They can figure and theorize as much as they please," said Governor Plaisted of Maine, last night. "But Wilson is going to carry Maine. The strength of Roosevelt in the primaries before the Chicago convention surprised his own supporters as well as throwing consternation into the Taft men. Roosevelt has increased his strength since those primaries. So with the strong Roosevelt line up, with the regular Republicans sticking to Taft and with a Democratic party united for Wilson, it's a rare Wilson outlook in the Pine Tree State for November. And the sentiment election here will make that fact plain too."

* * *

Benton committees, composed of Republican voters who will support Col. Everett C. Benton for Governor have been organized in eleven of the fourteen counties and others will be completed in the remaining counties within this week. Each of these is to be the nucleus of town and city committees, the work of enrolling which has already begun. At the Benton headquarters nomination papers containing slightly under 18,000 names favorable to Benton for the Republican nomination for Governor have been received. In addition to these there were still out yesterday 108 papers, reports from which were that they were all pretty generally signed, some of them containing within a few names of the 120 required to fill.

* * *

The Democratic party never had more than one member in the Governor's council, but that year they had confident of landing two seats. The Second district is what the Democratic State committee figures out will be won this week. Both seats. It is now represented by J. Stearns Cushing but with a Bull Moose candidate cutting into the Republican business, Secretary O'Leary of the State committee is willing to place a small wager that a Democrat will slide in.

* * *

Councillor Dan McDonald and his friends are wrathy because Congressman William F. Murray is to be permitted to go away to Washington without a real contest. McDonald blames ex-Congressman Keliher for upsetting a plan to have a live candidate against the Tenth district congressman, and accuses the ward 9 man of abandoning the Murray opposition.

CHAPTER VI

The New Filene Store

New England Men and Boys Are Partners in Our Progress

WHY a store for the disposal of made-ready apparel for men and boys in the new Filene building?

Because we feel that we can clothe men and boys as well and as economically as we have clothed women.

That sounds simple enough. But back of the statement is a challenge that must be met with conviction.

This men-and-boys-store enterprise has been placed in the keeping of men each of whom has proved the quality of absolute and enduring leadership in the zone of his activities. They know.

Now let us add to their know the opportunity to apply it as they could not apply it before.

Let us remove the leash of business-for-profit-only and give them the freedom of purchasing what made-ready apparel they please at the time they please so long as they please the public of Boston and all New England.

In other words, let them operate under the Filene system, which rates mere profit a bad second to best possible public service.

A system that provides

These men are enthusiasts. They believe in their work, their merchandise, their policies, their public.

They are specialists. That has come by instinct and by training. Each tries to excel in the work he is doing. And a vital part of that work is the work of co-operation, all day long, in season and out.

Ours is an organization that moves rapidly. Drones can have no part in it. Indifference cannot survive in it. It is a house where no mossy beds are made up for the mediocre.

We prefer to do certain things well rather than to do many things indifferently.

Thus we have found time for development of a system of specialized buying and selling the result of which is intelligent and timely public service on a basis of constant and uniform economy.

Can you imagine, Mr. New Englander, what these earnest and know-how experts in men's made-ready habiliments have done in the past eight months in the best American markets, in London and Scotland and Germany and France and Austria and everywhere else worth while?

First time any of them has had a chance to show what he can do under right conditions, with right merchandise.

First time any man's store men have had such freedom of choice in the world's markets.

First time we have been permitted to demonstrate what kind of a men's store we can conduct.

Three big firsts!

Watch them!

From day to day we shall tell what we have done and what we propose to do in the matter of outfitting New England men, leaving it to the reader to judge whether or not we are justified in regarding this new feature of the organization as needed.

SOCIETY CLASS HERE? ABSURD!

—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—"There is no such thing in this country as a 'society class.'" Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, president of the Women's National Committee, made this reply when asked by visitors if society women had rallied to the aid of Governor Wilson:

"It is ridiculous," she went on, "the way so many people speak of society folk as a class addicted to nothing else but amusing themselves. They are earnest, serious, thinking people, vitally interested in bettering conditions, but they do their work quietly."

Mrs. Harriman goes to Newport to attend Mrs. Vanderbilt's ball tomorrow night. Her activities, outside of attending social functions, are well known, particularly her efforts in establishing the fashionable Colony Club, the first of its kind in the country for women, also her work for tuberculosis patients and in starting municipal milk depots.

Yesterday Mrs. Harriman had interviews with two dozen visitors at headquarters and attended a luncheon at the Colony Club, at which John Purroy Mitchel and other city officials discussed the establishment of a detention home for girls. Mrs. Harriman laughed at the suggestion that she might ruin her health by leading such a busy life, which she apparently enjoys. "No, I am not afraid of that," she declared. "I am a Christian Scientist."

SECRETARY KNOX SAILS FOR JAPAN

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 23.—Secretary Knox, who was designated to represent President Taft at the Mikado's funeral in Tokio, accompanied by his party, sailed from here for Yokohama early today on the cruiser Maryland. Knox refused to comment upon the Pecorse-Roosevelt controversy.

Tooth Brushes for Children

'Good Cheer' Leader Coming

MISS CARTER SHOWING HOW TO USE TOOTHBRUSH.

Miss Theora Carter, the Seattle society girl and founder and president of the Society of Good Cheer, is coming to Boston with hundreds of tooth brushes to give to the children. She is going to show them how to use them; demonstrate herself their proper use and see that the children use them, and use them properly before she departs. She will distribute them on Boston Common.

Toothbrushes and their use is Miss Carter's fad, just at present, if one might call it that. She is now in New York, where she is showing the kiddies how to brush their teeth

The proper care of the teeth, Miss Carter believes, is one of the fundamental principles of health. She has turned her back on the life of a society butterfly and traveled all over the country trying to do something for other people. She has been in Boston before. Then she was furthering the work of her then new Society of Good Cheer.

Miss Carter, as she vigorously brushed the teeth of a youngster on the recreation pier at East Twenty-fourth street, New York, explained her work.

"You see that this child has in her the making of a perfect human being," said Miss Carter, earnestly. "Dint her teeth have been neglected. Look at her—small, emaciated, lacking blood; a ready victim for any disease germs that may attack her. Why? Because her teeth are not good. She cannot thoroughly masticate her food; she only bites it. So it is not assimilated."

"Be sure to use it," Miss Carter said to each girl and boy. "Polish your teeth, keep your mouth clean and you will grow up to be a happy, useful member of society. How many of you have had toothbrushes? Hold up your hands."

About fifty small hands went up; most of them looked as if they needed nailbrushes.

"And how many of you will use toothbrushes now?" asked Miss Carter, hopefully.

Up went 300 hands.

Miss Carter's Society of Good Cheer, as its name implies, seemingly has for its purpose to do as much good as possible in any direction.

CHARLES S. BIRD TO HEAD MOOSE TICKET IN MASSACHUSETTS

Charles S. Bird of Walpole will be the Progressive candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. He is the son of the late Francis W. Bird, the "sage of Walpole," who was one of the founders of the Republican party.

Against his original disinclination to take no active part in the campaign in this State he has yielded to the solicitations of the Bull Moose leaders and announced his candidacy in a letter addressed to the Progressives of the State. Steps will be taken immediately for the circulation of nomination papers to secure the appearance of his name on the ballot at the November elections.

Colonel Roosevelt is understood to have been consulted and to have placed the stamp of his approval on the candidacy of Mr. Bird. The matter was under discussion at a conference at Oyster Bay some weeks ago between the Colonel, James P. Magenis and Colonel Thomas F. Doherty.

$5,000 OPERA AT NEWPORT BALL

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Signor' new operetta, "The Merry Countess," plays its one-night stand for millionaires only tonight at Beaulieu villa.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt (Grace Wilson), who have leased Beaulieu for the season from William Waldorf Astor, give an elaborate ball tonight.

The novelty of the ball will be this special production of "The Merry Countess," brought on here today for this one performance by arrangement with the Shuberts. This entertainment costs Mr. Vanderbilt $5,000.

The entire company arrived here today from the New York Casino, seven principals, chorus, scenery "props" and all.

Several Special Dances.

An improvised theatre has been erected for the single production. The company's stage manager, electrician, property man and others who have to handle the operetta went to Beaulieu on arriving here to see that the improvised theatre had everything necessary to a finished production.

Smart society dearly loves a special theatrical "stunt" of this kind. If the performance goes smoothly and a perfect presentation has been guaranteed, Mrs. Vanderbilt, as hostess, will score a notable mark in the season's entertainment record.

In addition to the theatrical performance there will be several special dances at the ball. For the Oriental Costume Quadrille, society women are making wonderful preparations in stencilled taffeta gowns with effective ornamentation for the coiffure.

The young people are to take part in the Four Seasons' Quadrille which is being arranged by Mrs. Adolf Lauenberg.

Some of those who are to take part are Miss Sadie Jones, Miss Alice Chanler, Miss H. Dorothea Kane, Miss Roberta Willard, Miss Eugenia May Livingston, Miss Margaret F. Andrews, Miss Helen Fish, Miss Dorothy Bigelow, Miss Elizabeth Sandy, Miss Muriel Whitney, Miss Harriet Perry, Miss Mildred Rives, Miss Margaret Steward, Mrs. H. Robert L. Gerry, Miss Elsie Aldrich and others.

Persian Quadrille.

Then there is to be a Persian quadrille in which Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Richard Stevens and Mrs. Richard T. Wilson (Marion Mason of Boston) will dance. The Gypsy quadrille will be another leading feature.

Boston guests will probably include Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Mrs. Charles Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. George B. DeForest, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mayer and others.

TWO BOSTON OPERA SINGERS IN ACCIDENT

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Zenatello, the famous tenor, and his wife, known to the stage as Maria Gay, the celebrated Carmen, have been visiting in this city for a few weeks. Both are in good health and fine spirits, although they recently escaped serious injury in an automobile accident in the south of France. They were making the extended motor tour when their machine caught fire and was destroyed. They will sing here in the Fall.

MUSGROVE, MOOSER, REFUSES TO QUIT

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 24.—F. W. Estabrook, national committeeman at the meeting of the State Committee attempted to force the progressive members to resign. Secretary Musgrove was the man he was after. H. W. Pillsbury and J. O. Lyford agreed that this was no time to crowd members out of the party that the question of voting for Taft or Roosevelt had better be left to each member to decide for himself. Musgrove did not resign.

The Third Baby

By MORTON BIRGE.

Three kinds of babies on Allerton Beach,
Each one a plump, rosy, velvety peach.

First are the baby boys, mannikins brown,
Stout little men, with their infantile might,
Ready for anything, smile or a frown,
Lustily fierce in the naughty-boy fight.

Then come the little girls, dimpled and fair,
Sweeter than sugar plums—now you exclaim:
"Boy and girl babies are two kinds, but where
Is the third baby and what is its name?"

Oh, you third baby, you baby doll kind.
Bathing and sunning on Allerton shore,
Pleasant to see and Lord pity the blind—
Somebody sing us that "Chicken" once more.

Three kinds of babies on Allerton Beach,
Each one a plump, rosy, velvety peach.

Sir Thomas Sends Mayor a New Song: "Adeline" Banished

Fall in and follow me! Fall in and follow me!
I know the way to go; I'll take you to victory.
You do as I do and you'll do right;
Fall in and follow me.

This is "Fall In and Follow Me," Mayor Fitzgerald's new campaign song, imported from England especially to help boom the Fitzgerald senatorial campaign. The Mayor is going to make his debut with his new song at Falmouth tomorrow.

Incidentally "Sweet Adeline" must go back to the minors. The Mayor won't have much time to sing the soft, melodious strains of his famous old love song for some time. "Fall In and Follow Me" will take up all his spare moments.

Sir Thomas Lipton was responsible for Mayor Fitzgerald adopting his new song. While over in England he was with Sir Thomas some time, and "Fall In and Follow Me" was sung so much that the Mayor took a fancy to it and asked Sir Thomas to send him a copy.

Four-Round Bout Substituted for Lodge's Speech

A slashing four-round bout between "Kid" Goodman and Joe Jordan, past masters of the "manly art of self-defence" furnished a substitute for a speech by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge at the outing of the Essex Republican Club at the Pequonnock Inn, Middleton.

Besides Senator Lodge, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Secretary of the Navy Meyer and Congressman Augustus P. Gardner, were scheduled to fire the opening guns of the campaign in Essex County. They were detained in Washington, however. So the boxing bout was substituted.

William Clay, a prominent Salem Republican, was the third man in the ring, and proved an able referee. John Hays Hammond occupied a ringside seat and pronounced the go "just the thing."

J. F. SHAW WEDS BROOKLYN GIRL

James F. Shaw, formerly State Senator, but now in New York city, motored to the Berkshire Hills today with the bride of his second marriage, who was Miss Lois Kenyon of Brooklyn. The marriage took place at No. 842 Carroll street, Brooklyn.

Shaw met Miss Kenyon four years ago at Miss Gartner's school, in Farmington, Ct., where his sister, Miss Clarice Shaw, was a pupil. Miss Shaw and Miss Kenyon were roommates. This was just after Shaw's first wife, formerly Miss Nettie Eldredge of Portsmouth, had eloped to California with H. Kent Marble, their chauffeur.

Two years later Mrs. Shaw divorced Shaw and married Marble. Shaw became attentive to Miss Kenyon, now in her twenty-third year. Shaw is a bachelor. The first Mrs. Shaw, is living quietly at her father's Summer place at Chatham. She runs a tea room for Summer visitors. The twelve-year-old boy, Eldredge F. Shaw is with her.

The present Mrs. Shaw is a daughter of George W. Kenyon, president of a Brooklyn lithographic company.

Because of the recent death of Mr. Shaw's mother, the marriage was a very quiet one, and only a few relatives were present. The bride and bridegroom were attended by the former's sister and nephew, Miss Molly Boocock and Master Kenyon Boocock.

BOSTON TO HEAR OF PLAGUE CURE

Within two months Boston will become the centre of the medical world.

That long-sought cure for tuberculosis, which has baffled the minds of the world's greatest surgeons, has at last been discovered, and in Boston the secret will, in all probability, be announced to the medical profession.

Dr. W. J. Van Stockum, surgeon at the City Hospital in Rotterdam, and one of the world's greatest bacteriologists, has been invited to visit Boston. While here it is expected that he will disclose his cure for tuberculosis, which he has perfected after ten years of study.

This became known today, when Dr. J. A. Honeij of Cambridge made the AMERICAN in a remarkable interview what the noted Rotterdam surgeon had accomplished and also how the visit which he would make to Boston.

Dr. Honeij has just arrived in Boston, after a tour of ten months through Europe and Africa. While in Rotterdam he attended clinics at the Rotterdam City Hospital and learned the secret which will revolutionize the treatment of tuberculosis.

Coupled with this comes a similar statement from Dr. Francis V. Donoghue of Boston, also just returned from Europe, that he had learned of a new serum with which physicians could combat the dreaded cancer.

Has Seen Cured Cases.

Discussing the cure for tuberculosis, Dr. Honeij said:

"I am convinced that Dr. Van Stockum has discovered a serum that will be a complete success in curing tuberculosis. I have invited the great surgeon to visit Boston. When he comes he will probably read a paper before the Harvard Medical School and reveal his secret. I am not in a position to go into the details of this cure other than to say that I believe it to be one of the most remarkable discoveries in years.

"It is what is known as an X-rayel spleen. It is a fluid extract of spleen, charged for several hours. If a person has tuberculosis of the joints this fluid is given hypodermically. It causes no reaction, and in a few hours the pain caused by the tuberculosis is greatly lessened. I have seen several cases of absolute cure.

The AMERICAN reporter asked Dr. Honeij if it was not true that many persons suffering from pain in certain joints believed that it was rheumatism, when in reality it was a form of tuberculosis. He replied that that was true, and said:

"If a person has a continuous pain in any of the joints an X-ray machine should be used. One case which came under my observation was that of a patient suffering great pain in an arm. It was tuberculosis. The patient was unable to use the arm or extend the fingers. Dr. Van Stockum injected the fluid. In a few days the pain ceased, and in two weeks the patient was able to extend the fingers.

"It is a remarkable discovery. Dr. Van Stockum is very enthusiastic about the serum, and recently read a paper at the Tuberculosis Congress held in Rome. I had just completed an eight months' tour in South Africa among the miners in an effort to study tuberculosis. I heard about the cure and went to Rotterdam, where I attended clinics.

Authority on Tuberculosis.

"The miners in South Africa are greatly affected with surgical tuberculosis. In fact, all miners are, and in fact all persons who work at dusty occupations. The advantages of this new serum will, I am thoroughly convinced, demonstrate to the world that tuberculosis taken in time can be cured. The discoverer does not claim it will cure pulmonary tuberculosis, but certain demonstrations have convinced me that even that form of the dreaded disease can be coped with.

Dr. Honeij is a graduate of Tufts, and has been connected with the Boston City Hospital and also the Consumptives' Hospital. He has done considerable research work, and is an authority on the disease.

Dr. Donoghue also spoke about a remarkable broken leg treatment which he saw in Dussseldorf, Germany. He said that by the use of a new machine, the invention of Dr. Fischer of Budapest, a man was enabled to walk the day after he was treated for a complete fracture of the leg. The cancer remedy is the discovery of Dr. Stephen Secui of Heidelberg.

Bridge Links Newport Homes

MRS. J. GORDON DOUGLAS OF NEWPORT

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—Mrs. R. T. Wilson and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, Newport's star woman athlete, joined their cottages by a beautiful rustic bridge, 200 feet long, and illuminated in fairy effect, that guests might walk to and from each place after the dinners, dancing, bridge and singing.

Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, Mrs. Forsyth Wickes and Mrs. Craig Biddle entertained large dinner parties at the same hour. All the guests came to the Wilson and Douglas cottages afterward.

The affair was given in honor of Miss Beatrice Whitehouse of New York. Mrs. Wilson had one hundred of the guests on her piazzas and in dining and drawing rooms. These included Miss Meyer, daughter of the Secretary of the Navy; the members of the Russian and German embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, Mrs. Ogden Goelet, Miss Emily Randolph, F. E. Smith, M. P., and Mrs. Cecil Higgins of London.

Mrs. Douglas is expected to enter the woman's invitation tennis tournament, which will follow the men's national championship in progress on the Casino courts.

In the Woman's invitation matches Mrs. Gordon will have a chance to measure her skill with the racquet against that of Miss Eleonora Sears and other experts.

Mrs. Douglas has defeated Miss Edith Dodson, a fast player, in singles. In the double tournament for women a fortnight ago Mrs. Douglas was one of the winning pair, though she failed to stay through in the singles.

Mrs. Douglas is a hard and skilful rider, a strong swimmer, an adept auloist and an all-round player of outdoor games.

Friday, August 23— Watch Your Step! Friday, August 23

Friday the day and the twenty-third,
Look out for the double jinx,
Which stingeth today whomever it may,
From commoners up to kinks (see note).

(Note—Kinks—hot house or forced rhubarb.)

Today is the up-to-date hoodoo date.

Time was when Friday, the Thirteenth (see Tom Lawson) was supposed to be the open season on bad luck.

But the Twenty-third day of every month is now said to be even more unlucky, or more jinxier, as they say, than the Thirteenth.

Friday, the Twenty-third, is a bad combination.

Cases are known where a man has survived the Thirteenth successfully and has even picked the winning horse to boot. But along came the Twenty-third and what happened to him?

He had a mess with his wife.

He asked the boss for a raise just when the boss was figuring to scale down expenses.

He lost the baseball pool by one run.

He tried to argue with a cop.

He was drawn on a jury.

And his straw hat was run over.

Be careful today, or the jinx will get you going or coming.

STREET CAR AND TAXI COLLIDE

More than a thousand passengers were compelled to leave the street cars on Federal street early, following a collision between a north-bound Franklin street electric and a taxicab while a fire was in progress at No. 97 Franklin street. The was extinguished without loss, being confined to some waste paper, but traffic was held up a full half-hour because of the collision.

The taxi was driven by William Donovan of No. 42 Washington street, Charlestown. When the crash came the running-board of the electric was forced clear over the taxi wheel, locking the two vehicles together so firmly that it took a half hour to pry them apart.

None of the passengers was hurt, although there was considerable excitement in the rush that followed to vacate the wrecked electric. George Little of No. 19 Tilton street, Charlestown, was operating the electric car. The taxi carried no passengers.

Who Shall Be King of the Carnival?

Fill out and mail to Carnival Editor.

Good for Four Votes.

BUSY VOTING FOR CARNIVAL KING

Because coupons in the voting contest for King of the Revere Beach Mardi Gras were left out of the AMERICAN on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, today's coupon is good for four votes. So cut up the scissors, you electioneers, and clip-clip.

The Carnival Editor's mail has been so heavy that it is impossible to give the standing of the various candidates. Monday's AMERICAN will give a report on the number of votes each candidate has received up to that time.

The question asked in last Sunday's AMERICAN, "Who is the most popular man in Greater Boston?" has aroused a widespread discussion. One man wrote us a letter saying he had to toss up a coin between Foss and Fitzgerald and it came down Foss. Many others sent in coupons for the Mayor, however. From Captain J. D. McDonald of the U. S. S. Virginia to James F. Powers, men in all walks of life are being put forth as candidates by their friends.

Art Director Belsheid is working hard on the royal float in which the King and Queen will ride in the carnival. This is a costly equipage drawn by four horses.

Five men have a chance to be kings of the Mardi Gras on the five nights of the festival, so pile in your votes and a soon as the Carnival Editor can count 'em we'll tell you who is ahead.

MARY GREEN DESCRIBES HER FIRST DAY'S WORK

Mary Green, after her first day's work, writes of her experiences in her diary.

By MARY GREEN.

THURSDAY, Aug. 22.—It's a shame to neglect you, diary, when I know that some day it may mean so much to me but to turn back to these few pages and see what I've written here. As I turn over the pages yet to be written upon I can't help wondering JUST what may happen and just what I shall have to write there.

What do you suppose I'll be doing a year from now? Shall I be here or at home? A failure or a success? Isn't it strange, after all, that we can't even get a day's peep into the future. I suppose, though, that things are bound to come out all right sometime, but it certainly looks like a long wait and a hard struggle for me before that time ever arrives.

However, I have much for which to be thankful. I started my first day's work today. It was hard, but it did seem so good to be earning some money. True, three dollars a week isn't much, and the end of the week seems ages away, but I feel that I have much for which to be thankful. If I hadn't known what it was to really need work so badly, I'm sure I shouldn't have been the least bit content with this.

But night after night as I returned home from my fruitless search, heartsore and discouraged, I firmly made up my mind that whatever honest work I could get I would take and do willingly. So I'm going to do it.

People really seem to be so kind when you really know them here. At first they all seemed so strange and so distant and forbidding, but the girls where I work, the head waitress and all, are so kind and considerate and try so hard to help a person. Naturally they all knew I was green and inexperienced, and it seemed they couldn't do enough to help me along.

Then "Sam," who has been away, came up last evening to see how I was getting on. He's home now for a few days, and I'm sure I'm glad of it. He's some boy, is Sam, and I'm sure I don't know what I'd do if I couldn't think of him as a brother. He gave me such a nice talk last night—just like a brother might advise a sister. So I'll do as he says, I'm going to follow it. He said there was nothing that any girl could be that was better than being a true womanly girl; that to art or talent, success or anything a girl might possess would count so much as being just womanly—and after talking with him I really believe I am.

Finds Room for $1.50.

One of the girls at the counter next to mine told me of a place she knew where I could get a room for $1.50 a week and when she went through she came with me to get it. It won't be vacant until tomorrow so tonight is my last night here and I somehow feel a little lonely to think of going. But I must make my money go as far as possible. I don't know what I should have done if sister hadn't sent me the money—and I hardly dare think.

It seems rather nice to be where there are so many girls and I'm sure that when I'm off in a room by myself, away from them all, I shall miss them.

One of the girls I met the other day told me that she works in an office and ushers at a theatre in the evening and in that way makes a nice little weekly salary. I do wish I might get some sort of evening work to do, and I really must, for $3 a week will never be enough to buy my food, pay my room rent, laundry bills and pay for my music lessons. But I'm going to have those lessons even if I have to give up eating in order to get them.

I hate lived very cheaply today for as I went to work at half past ten I was given my breakfast there and when I finished work at three I ate again. The store in which the restaurant is, is one of the largest of the department stores in town and was easy to reach as I just walked straight down Tremont street to Winter and the store was almost at the corner.

When I went in I asked a few moments with the head waitress, put on my apron and was then taken out and introduced to the young lady at whose counter I was to assist. She commenced immediately to show me where I would find the dishes, the silverware, glass, etc., and then explained to me just how I was to serve my customers and how to prepare the different kinds of salads, ices, pies, etc. She next showed me how to care for my counter and commenced herself to clear away the dishes that happened to be left on the counter at the time. I was told to put the glasses to be washed on one shelf, the silver ware on another in a box and the rest of the dishes on a shelf opposite.

To Look for More Work.

After the counter was cleared, I started myself to get it ready for more customers by placing a napkin, a knife and fork and glass at each place. There was so much to remember and things were beginning to get so busy that for a few moments I lost my head completely, and just stood and gazed hopelessly about. But the girl at whose counter I was assisting immediately came to my rescue.

The waitresses were all so pleasant and the lady in charge was especially kind. It really wasn't so terribly hard, though there was so much walking back and forth to be done, so much quick thinking that by the time I was through I was terribly tired.

I rather expected that on the first day, though, and know tomorrow that it will be much easier for me. Tomorrow, I am going to look for other work too—something to do at night.

I'm too tired to write any more tonight. It seems good to be tired from work, though, rather than tired from looking for work. Must write a line to mother and then to bed for I must be up early and I'm sure I'll sleep better than I've slept any night yet.

TRAIN BANDIT WHO ROBBED MAIL DYING FROM OWN BULLET

TOPEKA, Kas., Aug. 23.—An unidentified man who robbed the mail car on a Union Pacific train after it had left Kansas City last night, then went to the sleeping car and demanded a berth, is dying today from a wound made by his own revolver.

The robbery occurred shortly after the train, the St. Louis, Colorado limited, had left Kansas City. The bandit is believed to have clubbed on the blind baggage at Kansas City and to have entered the mail car and concealed himself before the train left the Kansas City yards. A short distance out he appeared and with drawn revolver forced the clerks to stand back while he rifled the mail. Then, he forced them to bind each other.

Union Pacific detectives met the train here. Conductor Smith and Patrolman Sanders went to the bandit's berth and pushed back the curtain. The man had a revolver in his hand. Smith pressed in hand. The revolver was discharged and the robber was shot just over the heart.

MAN CHARGES DIVORCE PLOT

William Banks of Waltham filed objections with the Middlesex Superior Court at East Cambridge today to the divorce decree granted to his wife, Hortense B. Banks, on April 16 last, and to be made absolute on October 16 next.

Banks declared the divorce was obtained by conspiracy between his wife, Nora Howell of Waltham, who was named in the wife's suit, and William M. Caldwell, an automobile dealer of Waltham, who was "a material witness."

Banks alleges "false evidence and perjury," in addition to conspiracy.

Mr. and Mrs. Banks were married in Newton in 1901 and lived in Newton and Watertown.

The decree would become absolute October 16, next, six months after the "nisi" decree.

ARCHBOLD TELLS SENATE OF OIL TRUST AID TO G. O. P.

Three of the letters published in Hearst's Magazine, which have given rise to the charges against Senator Penrose. The figure at the right is the Senator himself. The upper note enclosed $25,000—which Penrose says was a campaign contribution—part of a $175,000 gift of which Roosevelt got the benefit of the rest. The second letter is Archbold's O. K. on the Industrial Commission's report—submitted to him before its publication. The letter at the bottom is the one directing the Senator to take the chairmanship of the Industrial Commission.

Personal. October 13,1904.

My dear Senator:- In fulfilment of our understanding,it gives me pleasure to hand you herewith certificate of deposit to your favor for $25,000.and with good wishes,I am,

Yours Truly,

To
Hon Boies Penrose,
1331 Spruce St.,
Phila., Pa.

(Sgnd) Jno. D. Archbold.

"The understanding must have been complete and the chievement notable to warrant so generous a recognition of Senator Penrose's 'intelligence and integrity'"

February 21, 1900.

Hon. Boies Penrose,
Senate Chamber,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Senator:

I have your kind note of yesterday with enclosures, which latter I beg to return you herewith. We think the report is so fair that we will not undertake to suggest any changes.

With many thanks, I am

Very truly yours,

Jno. D. Archbold.

The above letter refers to the report of the Industrial Commission. Archbold's letter approving the Commission's findings was written eight days before the report was presented to Congress

Hon. Boies Penrose, July,1901.

Philadelphia, Pa.

My dear Senator:-

Following the lamentable death of Senator Kyle, we are very strongly of the opinion that you should take the Chairmanship of the Industrial Commission.

With kind regards, I am

Very truly yours,

Jno. D. Archbold.

Cash Contributions to Bliss and Penrose Amounting to $125,000.

"You state that you made one contribution of $25,000. Was that in a check sent to Senator Penrose?" asked Senator Clapp.

"I should have said not. I don't find any letter. In the alleged copy which has been printed purporting to be such a letter, I notice that it reads: 'Signed, John D. Archbold,' but it is quite unlike my signature. I would have said that I had given it to Senator Penrose in currency," answered Mr. Archbold.

"Do you recall distinctly making the payment of $25,000?"

"I recall that, and I also recall the agreement. It was made at my office and I think the payment was made at my office. The circumstance of the signature to the letter leaves the letter open to suspicion."

"What time would you fix as the time you made the payment?"

"I should think it was in September, or very early in October."

When this payment was made, Archbold said, there was none present to the best of his recollection, but it was barely possible that Rogers was present, he repeated. He asserted in answer to questions that he had charge of matters of this kind in the localities about New York.

"What conference did you have with Bliss regarding the $25,000?" asked Senator Clapp.

"I think that Bliss was cordially favorable that this amount should go to Penrose," said Mr. Archbold.

"The contribution of $25,000, then, was involved in your conversations with Bliss regarding the $100,000?"

"Yes."

Asks About Steel.

"Subsequent to the payment of $100,000 and $25,000, did you have any conference with any member of the National Committee or with any one acting in its behalf with reference to a further contribution?"

"I did; with Mr. Bliss."

"When was that?"

"I should say early in October; not later than the tenth. There were two or three conferences. The result was we declined to make the further contribution."

"What conference did you have with Mr. Cortelyou?"

"I had no conference with him."

Continuing, Chairman Clapp proceeded to inquire into Archbold's connection with other corporations, and what, if any, contributions were made through them to the Roosevelt campaign fund.

"Did you have any conference with any one other than Mr. Bliss," he asked.

"No," answered Mr. Archbold.

"During the Fall of 1904 were you generally interested in United States Steel?"

"Only as a small shareholder. I was not interested in a large way."

"Did you have any conference with the officials of the steel company regarding the Roosevelt campaign funds?"

"No."

"Were you connected with any conference held by the Sugar Trust, the Tobacco Trust or the Harvester Trust, with reference to contributions?"

"I was not."

"Were you interested in any railroad conference?"

"My contributions to the Roosevelt campaign fund and my acts in support of the Republican party were limited to my position as director of the Standard Oil Company."

He Meant Roosevelt.

"You had no conference with any one representing a railroad?"

"I had conferences with no one save Mr. Bliss. I talked very frankly with him and explained to him that, while we were desirous of not desire to make it unless it making this contribution, we did would be approved and appreciated by the powers that be. Bliss smilingly assured me that I need have no apprehension on that score."

"By the powers that be you meant Theodore Roosevelt, did you?"

"I did."

"Do you know of any contributions made personally by H. H. Rogers or Mr. Rockefeller?

"Which Rockefeller do you mean?"

"Was there any other Rockefeller outside of John D., who might have been interested in contributing to this campaign fund?"

"William Rockefeller was even more active than John D. during the campaign. Both he and Rogers knew of the $125,000 contribution made. I do not know personally whether they made other contributions beyond that."

"Were you solicited by Harriman personally to contribute to his fund?"

"I was not solicited personally, and if any money was given by Mr. Rogers or Mr. William Rockefeller it was given without my knowledge."

The Harriman Fund.

"Did you know the amount of the Harriman contribution?"

"I heard it was about $30,000."

"Do you know whether any insurance company contributed to this fund?"

"No, I do not know personally."

At this point Senator Pomerene, one of the Democratic members of the investigating committee, took up the examination.

"Can you tell where the first conference with Mr. Bliss was held?" asked Senator Pomerene.

"The conference was held in my office. H. H. Rogers and myself were present and we went over the platform carefully with Mr. Bliss," answered Mr. Archbold.

"Will you give the conversation during that conference?"

"We inquired of the attitude of Colonel Roosevelt toward the business interests, and we were assured by Mr. Bliss that he was a fair and conservative man who would carry out the platform pledges of his party with consideration for the business interests of the country."

"Were any public questions discussed?"

"We were assured by Mr. Bliss that Roosevelt would take a conservative view of the tariff revision and no attempt to injure the business interests."

"Were these expressions by Mr. Bliss the cause of your contribution?"

"Yes."

"Then it was because of Mr. Bliss' view that Roosevelt's attitude toward large business interests was friendly that you became interested in his election?" asked Senator Pomerene.

"Yes," answered Archbold.

"Did you and Rogers have a conference with your business associates following your conference with Mr. Bliss?"

"Yes, we took the matter up with the officers of the company. As I recall it, W. H. Tilford, F. Q. Barstow, Walter Jennings, William Rockefeller, H. H. Rogers, myself, and possibly one or two others, were present at this conference. Our interests being with the Republican party, we decided we would contribute $125,000 to the campaign fund."

Distribution of the Cash.

"Did you determine how this money was to be distributed?"

"We decided that $100,000 would be given to Bliss. Afterward I had a conversation with Senator Penrose, during which he assured me that the party needed money badly for the campaign, and we then decided that $25,000 would be given to Senator Penrose. Then $100,000 was given to Bliss and $25,000 to Senator Penrose."

"Was this money of the Standard Oil Company or the money of its directors?"

"It was the money of the company."

"Did you have any other conversation with Bliss?"

"He called at my office a week later to receive the contribution. I said to him then, 'I want to say to you that I want it known to Colonel Roosevelt that we are contributing this money and don't want to make the contribution unless it will be gratefully received.'"

"When you told Mr. Bliss you wanted it known you were contributing this money, what did he say?"

"He told me that I need have no apprehension on that score."

"Did you refer to Roosevelt by name."

"Agreed to See President."

"I did, and Bliss then said to me, 'I will undertake to represent you personally with President Roosevelt.'"

"Did you give a written subscription?"

"No, it was an oral agreement."

"Why did you pay this contribution in currency?"

"Why, I supposed it was easier. The money had been drawn and was ready to be paid."

"You were not anxious that others than the power-that-be (Colonel Roosevelt) should know of this contribution, were you?"

"No, I don't imagine that either side was anxious to have it made public at that time."

"And the currency eliminated the necessity of sending a check to the banks and clearing house, did it not?"

"That is true."

"Did you have any other conference with Mr. Bliss?"

"Yes, he visited my office a third time and asked for another contribution. He outlined the details of the campaign and said it was necessary to have more money."

"Did you inquire whether Colonel Roosevelt had knowledge of your former contribution?"

"Mr. Bliss gave me every assurance, not only that past donations has been acceptable, but that donations in the future would also be highly acceptable."

"How much did he ask on this third visit?"

Wanted $150,000 More.

"He wanted a contribution of $150,000."

"What did your company do with regard to this?"

"A meeting was held at my office and we decided to stand on what we had already done."

"You regarded Mr. Bliss as a man of high character, did you not?"

"I knew of no man with a higher reputation for integrity. I knew him for years and I trusted him implicitly."

"You would have had no reason to doubt his word if he had assured you that Theodore Roosevelt was satisfied with your contribution?"

"I most certainly would not have doubted his word."

"What did he say when you informed him that your company had refused to contribute further to the Roosevelt campaign fund?"

"He informed me that I was making a serious mistake. He said that from motives of patriotism the company should be willing to support the Republican candidate. Then he added: 'Also, speaking to you, I think you lose by refusing to contribute more. There are others who will contribute. You had better do it quickly.'"

After you declined to make the second contribution were you informed that Theodore Roosevelt was grateful to you for not making it?"

Knew of No Plan to Return It.

"I most certainly was not."

"Had you any knowledge from Bliss, Cortelyou or others that your contribution would be returned."

"I never heard of that until a few days ago, when I read of it in the newspapers."

The witness explained that his retraction of the demand that Roosevelt be grateful for the Standard Oil contribution was caused by rumors which he had heard, indicating the candidate might prove ungrateful.

Archbold said that Bliss told him of needs for money throughout the States that were regarded as doubtful.

"Did you ever see him with reference to the business of that campaign."

"I went to his place of business once after Mr. Roosevelt and some of his bureau heads began making his unjust attacks on me. Mr. Bliss threw up his hands and

ECZEMA ON LIMB ITCHED DREADFULLY

Scratched in Sleep. Spread Rapidly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Worked Wonders. Stopped Itching and In Less Than a Week Healed Entirely. Cost 75 Cents.

27 Whitney Ave., Cambridge, Mass. — "My trouble was eczema. It began by my hose-supporter rubbing and poisoning the skin on my leg just above the knee. The eruption was small pimples which itched dreadfully. When I scratched them they would scab over and they itched so nights that I scratched the scabs off in my sleep. They spread rapidly. I used witch hazel, different carbolic salves but nothing did it any good until a neighbor told me how her hands were cracked open and bleeding and that Cuticura cured her. I had been to much expense buying remedies that did no good that I sent for samples of Cuticura Soap and Ointment before using. They worked wonders. They stopped the itching and in less than a week's time it had healed entirely, after using a full-sized box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap, costing but 75c." (Signed) Mrs. W. E. Lewis, Nov. 25, 1911.

said, 'I thoroughly sympathize with you. I believe the attacks are unjust myself, but I cannot help you.' That was some time after the election, perhaps a year after."

"Who were the bureau heads?"

"More Than a Coincidence."

"Garfield and Smith (Herbert Knox Smith) and to their line of attack Mr. Roosevelt invariably put his seal of approval without any investigation or any knowledge of the facts. It came to me as more than a coincidence. Whenever any question of legislation was pending, or whenever any matter was before the courts, there was always one of the reports.

"Why did you say it was more than a coincidence?"

"Because it always happened. These reports were put out with Mr. Roosevelt's approval at critical times by Garfield and Smith, who were puppets who were to jump when Mr. Roosevelt pulled the string. We have all these reports, and it should be written up some day. The time is not ripe to publish them, but there never was a more outrageous course taken by any government in the world."

"To what do you attribute these so called unjust attacks?".

"Well, I don't know. I don't know."

Archbold said that the Bliss later told him that it would have been different if "we had done as he wished us to do."

Letters to Penrose.

Archbold said that he had a record of only three letters to Senator Penrose, and he presented them to the committee. None of them bore upon the matter under consideration. One of them was a request for Penrose to use his influence toward an appointment for Archbold's brother-in-law, written in April 1904, but this was not in the records.

Archbold declared he also had talks with Senators Scott and Elkins of West Virginia, and that both Scott and Elkins were disposed to give the Standard Oil credit for bringing enough votes into West Virginia to change it from a Democratic to a Republican State.

He said further that the employes of the Standard Oil Company were advised of the stand which the company had taken.

He said he recalled no contribution to the Democratic campaign that year, although some of the individual directors may have contributed.

"Do you remember Judge Parker making a charge that Theodore Roosevelt was being aided by the trusts?"

"Remember Incidents Clearly."

"I remember it."

"Do you remember the denials?"

"I remember the incidents clearly."

"After these denials by the President, did you have any talk with Bliss or his managers on the subject?"

"I did not."

"What was the denomination of the bills with which the $100,000 was paid."

"They were $1,000 and $500 bills."

Archbold discussed the Harriman incident and said that both H. H. Rogers and Harriman himself had told him of the raising of Harriman's fund.

"Did you see President Roosevelt?" asked Senator Pomerene.

"Not during the campaign," answered Archbold.

"Did you see Roosevelt afterwards."

"Mr. Rogers and I called after he had been elected. We spent a pleasant evening at the White House, during which President Roosevelt freely discussed the campaign which had just ended. He said there was some criticism of the contributions, but that could not be avoided."

"What criticism did he say was made?"

"The matter of the insurance company contributions was taken up at that time, I believe."

Senator Penrose asked that Archbold be instructed to search for all papers relating to the hearing and bring them before the committee when he returns in October from his European trip. It was also arranged that a deputation from the committee will call upon William Rockefeller, who now is ill, and obtain a statement from him.

Other Standard Oil officers will be subpoenaed to appear before the committee.

Mr. Archbold was then excused.

Plan to Summon Roosevelt.

Colonel Roosevelt in person will be haled before the committee, which Senator Clapp of Minnesota is chairman, according to the plans of Senator Penrose, it is declared here today.

Senator Penrose also is said to be planning to have ex-State Senator William Flinn, leader of the Progressives in Pennsylvania, appear before the committee.

One thing was made plain by the extraordinary proceedings on the Senate yesterday, namely, that some of the Democrats and old guard Republicans are cooperating with Penrose in the hope of destroying Roosevelt.

Colonel Roosevelt was made the central figure in all attacks, and the subject of severe criticism, which held the attention of the Senate almost to the exclusion of every other topic. Penrose first had a long conference with La Follette, who hates Roosevelt.

Under the guise of presenting a resolution that would institute an inquiry into the subjects discussed by him Wednesday, and bring before the Senate Committee the persons named in his public confession, Senator Penrose succeeded in diverting attention from his own predicament and bringing Colonel Roosevelt into the limelight as the subject of attack.

ROCKEFELLERS APPROVED OIL TRUST CAMPAIGN GIFT

"William Rockefeller was even more active than John D. during the campaign. Both he and Rogers knew of the $125,000 contribution made. I do not know personally whether they made other contributions beyond that."

"Were you solicited by Harriman personally to contribute to his fund?

"I was not solicited personally, and if any money was given by Mr. Rogers or Mr. William Rockefeller it was given without my knowledge."

"Did you know the amount of the Harriman contribution?"

"I heard it was about $50,000."—From John D. Archbold's testimony before Senate committee.

"HE ASKED FOR THE SWORD AND HE GOT IT," EXCLAIMS ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—"He asked for the sword and he got it." This was the characteristic comment Colonel Roosevelt made on Senator Penrose today, when he arrived at the Pennsylvania station on his return from Wilkesbarre.

The cheering commuters who happened to be at the station when the Colonel's train pulled in demanded more, but the Bull Moose candidate explained that he was in too much of a hurry to talk, and besides he had already delivered himself of all the facts known to him in the relations between the Standard Oil Company and Senator Penrose.

Colonel Roosevelt went at once to his office at the Outlook and with characteristic vigor pitched into a mountain of work and denied himself to all visitors.

He planned to leave at noon for his home in Oyster Bay, where he will rest till Wednesday. On that date he will leave for a three days' campaign through Vermont.

The Colonel expressed the conviction today that the Progressive party was in a fair way of carrying the State of Vermont.

Next week the Green Mountain State will be the scene of great campaigning activity. Colonel Roosevelt will be pitted against Governor Marshall of Indiana, the Vice Presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket.

Denial by Perkins.

When the statement of Senator Penrose regarding an underwriting of $3,000,000 to capture the Republican National Convention for Roosevelt was read to George W. Perkins he said:

"It is a preposterous statement, without a word of truth in it."

Colonel Roosevelt before he left Wilkesbarre flayed Senator Penrose in a diseussion of the recent exposures in the Senate.

"The Senator," he said, "is like a cuttlefish, which, lacking the courage to fight its enemy, squirts ink, in the hope that it may escape."

In denouncing the Senator, Colonel Roosevelt repeated his denial that he had known of any Standard Oil contribution to the Presidential campaign in 1904. He said:

"We can't have any reform unless we have honesty in both business and politics.

"Recently, certain definite and specific charges were made against Senator Penrose. I personally knew nothing of them and did not even look into the charges until Mr. Penrose succeeded in riveting my attention upon them. Yesterday he got up in the Senate to deny these charges and brought in hearsay charges against me.

"Like a Cuttlefish."

I call your attention to an analogue to Senator Penrose among the inferior forms of animal life—the cuttlefish. When the cuttlefish is attacked by an enemy which it lacks the courage to oppose it "squirts ink" that the enemy will attack the ink instead of the cuttlefish. I now propose to clear away the ink and attack the cuttlefish.

"The statement of Mr. Penrose was that he had heard that by my direction $100,000 was asked for from the Standard Oil Company for my campaign, and contributed, and that a further sum was was asked for. Mr. Penrose gave this evidence on hearsay. It is a thoroughly base and contemptible thing for Mr. Penrose to repeat such evidence on hearsay.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Every trust-controlled newspaper in the land is doing everything in its power to beat me. Do you think that these trust papers would be trying to beat me if I had been satisfactory to the Standard Oil Company and that crowd?

They are against me because not one trust, not one individual, was able to influence me while I was President. That's why they hate me.

JOHN D. ARCHBOLD STAR LETTER WRITER OF STANDARD OIL CO.

John Dustin Archbold, Standard Oil's star letter writer and often called the Trust's "corresponding secretary," was born at Leesburg, O., in 1848. When sixteen he went to the Pennsylvania oil regions and spent eleven years in the business of getting the crude oil. He became connected with Standard Oil in 1875 or 1876 and has been one of the leading figures in the oil octopus ever since.

Archbold, prior to the trust hearing four years ago, had been regarded as nothing more than a satellite of John D. Rockefeller, the "king." Archbold was known as "Oil's little king." Then came the prosecution by the government's trust buster, Attorney Frank B. Kellogg, in 1907, and the two years following. During the hearing in New York, the entire country was startled by the publication in the newspapers owned by William Randolph Hearst of letters written by Archbold to Senators and other statesmen who had a hand in making the laws at Washington.

Archbold Letters.

These letters were similar to letters now being published in Hearst's Magazine, and which have led to the present inquiry. In these letters great sums were mentioned as being paid to prominent men by Archbold, acting for Standard Oil Company.

Archbold went on the stand in the trust inquiry conducted by Kellogg. He proved a good witness for Standard Oil, and frequently fell back on the sentence "I don't know." Of himself all he would say was this:

"I have been with the Standard Oil since 1875 or 1876. I was first connected with the oil business in western Pennsylvania and I came into the Standard through the Acme Oil Company. I have had an office in No. 26 Broadway since the building was erected, some fifteen or more years ago. I am one of the vice-presidents."

But Archbold had not told the whole truth. He was more than a vice-president, according to his own testimony. He revealed the fact that the "king" had retired and he himself had stepped into the king's shoes.

The only interview Archbold gave out during that hearing was as follows:

Reporters—Mr. Archbold, when Mr. Rockefeller was a witness he held a letter and gave us a statement at the end of each session. Can't you do the same thing?

Archbold—Oh, I am not a philosopher. I have eaten buckwheat cakes and sausages for years and still have health and digestion.

REMARKABLE ADMISSIONS MADE BEFORE U. S. SENATE IN VESTIGATORS.

Reporters—What started you in the oil business, Mr. Archbold?

Archbold—Necessity. I began as a clerk with a refining concern. I was then sixteen years old. No one then had any idea of the great future of the oil business. It's remarkable how it's developed, isn't it?

And then he quit talking.

The fact that Archbold was really one of the most powerful and important factors in Standard Oil was one of the facts brought out by the Kellogg prosecution. Archbold, when pressed for an answer by Kellogg as to his own importance, replied:

"It is perhaps fair to myself to reply that I am perhaps more active than any other individual, longer in the service and more prominent in the oil side of the business."

As a reward for his work, Archbold was given the presidency of the big oil trust. Archbold has given a fortune to Syracuse University, just as John D. Rockefeller has given millions to Chicago University. Once, several years ago, in an address to the Syracuse University alumni in New York city, Archbold referred to the charges made against Rockefeller that his money was tainted.

"But if I felt for a minute that there was anything tainted in the money I gave Syracuse," he said, "I would be a craven and a criminal."

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

WHILE the Red Sox go merrily on to the world's series—being eight and a half games in front today—step in, gentlemen and have a glimpse at the side show! The Pilgrims took three out of four games from the Cincinnati Reds and then Frank Chance's Cubs fell on them. So that there might not be any doubt about the result, the Cubs packed away seventeen runs to the Pilgrims' five, and Otto Hess who pitched the celebrated nineteen-innings game against the Pirates, was the chief victim. Meanwhile, as previously suggested herein, the Giants went over to Pittsburgh and were beaten, 3 to 2 in the first game, although they won the second, 8 to 6.

YESTERDAY the Giants led the Cubs by four and a half games. Today they are four games ahead of the ex-champions.

LITTLE by little, but just as sure, is the Giants' margin being swept away. McGraw has more hard tussles ahead with the Pirates, while Chance plays the Pilgrims. Then McGraw moves to Cincinnati, where he ought to expect to lose one game, if the Reds are ever to beat the Giants, and Chance entertains the Brooklyn Dodgers.

* * *

WITH this tucked away in your mind, I pass in to the big show! The Red Sox lost to Cleveland Wednesday, while Washington won from the Tigers. But in the second encounter the Tigers beat the Senators yesterday, 9 to 6, while the Sox, having dumped all the bad baseball that was in them into Fenway Park Wednesday, came on and put the "Naps" to sleep yesterday by a 9 to 0 score.

* * *

SO today the Red Sox are just as far ahead as they were before the cyclone struck—eight and a half games. The Sox have thirty-eight games left. The Senators have thirty-seven. Does anybody believe that the Senators can make up that difference of eight and a half games in thirty-seven efforts. Why, if they won all the thirty-seven, the Red Sox could lose nine and still tie them.

* * *

THE Sox have won eighty games. When they win twenty-one more they will equal the Athletics' record of won games at the close of last season. They can lose seventeen of their remaining thirty-eight and still reach the Mackmen's 1911 record of victories.

* * *

THE Athletics packed the 1911 pennant away for good on September 25 last. The Red Sox ought to accomplish the feat earlier this year.

* * *

EIGHT thousand "fans" at Fenway Park cheered in the third inning yesterday when the scores board man gave Detroit 4 and Washington 0. And they roared when he put up the second inning figures: Detroit, 2; Washington, 0.

* * *

CHRISTY MATTHEWSON says that Ray Collins is one of the two or three best left-handers in the business. Collins pitched the second against Cleveland. In the third inning Peckinpaugh walked. In the sixth Ryan drove the ball over second base and, although "Heinie" Wagner made a marvelous one-handed running pick-up, he could not beat the runner, and Graney was the "Naps'" first hit off Collins.

IN the eighth, with one out, Adams dropped the first clean hit in the right field. Peckinpaugh was safe when Larry Gardner made a running dive for his bunt and fumbled it and, after Baker, batting for Mitchell struck out on three pitched balls, Wyo, who had replaced Wagner at shortstop, juggled Ryan's drive and the bases were filled. Birmingham then popped to Ball.

* * *

THAT was the completest story of Cleveland's offensive work against Collins. Two hits, one base on balls and two bases on errors. Collins struck six men out. He gave Mitchell three wide ones in the sixth and then put three over, and put Baker, a pinch hitter, to sleep with three in succession.

* * *

COLLINS is six feet and an inch tall. He stands on a mound fifteen inches high. He starts to pitch on his toes. Before delivering the ball he reaches both long arms away above his head, as far as they will go. Just before he lets go, the ball is about ten feet higher than the home plate. From that remarkable height—farther up than any other pitcher ever starts his delivery—Collins quickly winds his arm overhand and, as Matthewson says, the batter hits with Collins' curve instead of with the ball. The batter expects a bit under the ball and into the air, but usually hits it to the ground, unable to place it.

JOE JACKSON, the Cleveland left-hand hitting slugger, who is right behind Tris Speaker in the batting averages, batted 1.000 Wednesday, making four hits. Yesterday he delivered fly balls, respectively, to Speaker, Engle, Lewis and Hooper. Each of the outfielders gathered in one of his high ones. The other pitchers, with few exceptions, hit on the ground or struck out. When they hit Collins' pitching on the ground, of course, they could not locate their drives.

* * *

SPEAKER batted for 1.000 yesterday. He, Ball and Gardner gave some stirring exhibitions of base-running. In the first inning Ball was safe on Lajoie's error, stole second and when Carisch's throw went into centrefield, kept on to third. Speaker walked. A hit and run was signalled and Speaker started for second, drawing Peckinpaugh out of position. Lewis' drive went past where Peckinpaugh had stood, scoring Ball and advancing "Spoke" to third. Then Gardner lifted a fly to short left. Speaker made a marvelous slide, just beating Ryan's throw.

BALL singled in the third and another hit and run was signalled. Kaier pitched out to the catcher a cinch to nail Ball, but Speaker reached so far out that he just followed the ball and "Spoke's" effort resulted in a scratch three-bagger to far left. Which was accidental hitting to talk about! Tris scored on a passed ball.

* * *

GARDNER singled and stole second. Engle walked. Wagner purposely struck at three and the two runners pulled off a double steal so successfully that Gardner scored when he threw Carisch's throw away over Olson's head.

* * *

IN the fifth Speaker singled again, ran so fast that Johnson could not get him on Engle's drive to first and took third on a wild pitch. Gardner walked. A double steal was attempted and the throw to Peckinpaugh being good, there was nothing to do but let Gardner come home, Speaker dancing between first and second, while Speaker gradually edged off third, not quite far enough to draw a throw. Finally Gardner plunged back for first, sliding face down and safe at the same time Peckinpaugh threw a distance of fifteen feet to first and Speaker started for home. The feat was so successfully accomplished that Speaker scored when Peckinpaugh's throw went wild.

* * *

HOOPER scratched a double to the sixth and Speaker scored him by a single to left, but Olson pulled off a play at "Spoke" this time. When Ryan hooked the ball towards the plate, Olson leaped, caught it and shot it to Lajoie, who, with Johnson, caught the surprised Sox outfielder trying to make two bases on the play.

TIME FLYING IN VOTE CONTEST

Well, candidates, you know now exactly what you have to do in order to be one of the twenty to take the AMERICAN'S free trips to the 1912 World's Series games.

The vote standing which appeared in the AMERICAN yesterday should be a tonic to every candidate whose name was printed, for the reason that the lowest ones in the list were separated but very little from the leaders. The right kind of hustle will put the candidate whose name was last in yesterday's list up among the leading twenty by September 14.

The Contest Editor will make an announcement in next Sunday's AMERICAN of the utmost importance to each and every candidate who has over 1,000 votes to his credit. Watch for it!

Contestants are requested when sending in votes to do up the ten-vote coupons separate from the two-vote coupon. Do up your ten-vote coupons in lots of one hundred and do up your two-vote coupons in lots of one hundred, but do not mix them.

Any candidate who wishes to have his photograph printed in the AMERICAN had better send it to the Contest Editor, No. 7 Whitaker square, without delay.

Don't fail to be on the lookout for the special contest announcement next Sunday.

M'GRATH WINS ON MAT.

Jack McGrath proved too much for Polski in the wrestling feature at the Grand Opera House, winning in two straight falls, his lighter opponent being easily worn down. A mixed and scissors mold and an arm scissors, in sixteen and eleven minutes, respectively, did the trick.

Heavyweight Crown Now Begging for Real Champ

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

THE heavyweight pugilistic situation is in as bad a muddle as it was years ago when Jim Jeffries laid down his fighting gloves. Johnson has retired without much warning and there is no man—white or black—who can attract attention to himself as the next best.

If Sam Langford and Sam McVea were in this country it would be different, probably, but the two negroes who were regarded as Johnson's most formidable rivals are away in Australia and are likely to remain there and engage in "return matches" every once in a while. It is just possible that Johnson timed his relinquishment of boxing while McVea and Langford were absent so as to add to the confusion.

Joe Jeanette has claimed the championship and so has Tommy Burns, in neither instance does there appear a disposition on the part of the sporting public to admit that the right party has been located.

JEANETTE HAS LOST PRESTIGE.

Jeanette, through judicious and persistent advertising, has been kept in the forefront as a challenger of Johnson for more than a year. According to some of the Philadelphia critics, however, Jeanette lost prestige recently through a bad showing with Battling Jim Johnson, who, according to all accounts, is neither a clever boxer nor a free-center.

In the second round of the bout Johnson floored Jeanette with a right hook, and of the two men Johnson was the more rattled and surprised. He extended his hand to Jeanette in an apologetic manner when Jeannette arose, and by doing so added the final touch of ridicule to a ridiculous display. Now it is felt in Philadelphia that Jeanette will have to do something to rehabilitate himself before aspiring to Johnson's shoes.

As for Tommy Burns, his sincerity is not questioned, but there is doubt as to his ability to give a satisfactory account of himself after such a season of inactivity as he has put in. That Burns has faith in himself is evidenced by his announcement that he will furnish a side bet of $10,000 for a bout with any disputant of his right to claim the championship.

In the ordinary course of things one would expect to hear of White Man Attler being touted as the one best entitled to wear Johnson's laurels. When Palzer won his first few contests he was looked upon as the most promising of all the hopes. The critics advised him not to be too precipitate and risk challenging Johnson, but to wait a year and his chances of defeating the colored man would be vastly improved.

Palzer added another scalp to his belt and, strange to say, his winning fight lowered him in the opinion of the experts. He defeated Bombardier Wells, the most widely advertised English heavyweight in years, and instead of gaining credit for it was flouted for an awkward ring man who triumphed simply because Wells' strength was affected by being required to train during one of New York's hot spells.

Recently not much has been heard of Palzer as a championship candidate, and it looks as though he is to become a second Al Kaufman in the matter of making winning fights and getting no credit for them. At that, however, he is probably the best white heavy in sight.

Jim Flynn, the fair-famed Pueblo fireman, who engaged in a preliminary altercation recently with Jack Johnson at Las Vegas, has arrived in San Francisco to keep a Labor Day appointment with big Charlie Miller at Coffroth's Daily City arena.

It was Flynn's intention to locate at Billy Shannon's San Rafael camp, where he trained for former contests in San Francisco, but, in the language of the fight, Miller "beat him to it." Miller also had an eye on Shannon's as a desirable place to condition, and made his arrangements before Flynn put in an appearance.

After looking over the ground Flynn decided to go into quarters at the Seal Rock House. He lost no time in having his gymnasium equipment unpacked, and expects to begin the grind of training today. Jack Curley, Flynn's manager, will arrive to take charge of affairs about ten days before the bout.

What adds interest to the Flynn-Miller match is the fact that Flynn was the first heavyweight, herculean, who employed Miller as a sparring partner. This was when Flynn trained at Shannon's for his first contest with Jack Johnson. Miller, at that time, was one of the awkward squad with little to commend him but a willingness to learn and a capacity for hard knocks.

Flynn would be reticent on the subject of his Fourth of July fight with Johnson if his friends and acquaintances would let him. He says with a touch of sadness that he recognized when too late he made the mistake of his life when he lost his head and began butting the champion.

"I was enraged at the way he held on to me," said Flynn. "I became excited again when I viewed the moving picture, for they show Johnson holding so plainly I know, and Johnson knows, that I was wearing him down, and if I had not lost my head I would have been the world's champion today."

JOHNSON BOUT FOR BALTIMORE

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Following the refusal of the State Boxing Commission to allow the ten-round boxing contest between Jack Johnson and Joe Jeannette to take place in this city on September 2d, Jesse and Edward McMahon, presidents of the St. Nicholas A. C., announced today that they would probably stage the bout in Philadelphia or Baltimore.

Johnson again announced his retirement from the ring as soon as the news was flashed to him, but the McMahons believe that they can persuade him to change his mind, if no objections are offered to the contest in the two cities mentioned.

The promoters announced that they would make a trip to Chicago shortly to consult Johnson. Jeannette says he will not Johnson anywhere, although he preferred New York.

The State Boxing Commission has reaffirmed its decision not to allow Johnson to appear in this State "for the good of the sport."

St. Eulalias to Meet Bay Views in Final

The third and deciding game of a series to decide the championship of South Boston will be played on the M Street Playgrounds tomorrow between the St. Eulalias and Bay Views.

The first game resulted in a win for the Bay Views, 1 to 0, while the St. Eulalias won the second, 5 to 4.

The scores alone are enough to show how evenly the two teams are matched, and another good game is carded. Ross for the St. Eulalias and Conley for the Bay Views will again be the pitching sensations.

It is expected that another record-breaking crowd will be on hand, as both teams have numerous followers.

Houser Purchases Farm Down in Maine

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 23.—It was learned today that Ben Houser, first baseman of the Boston Nationals, has purchased the Edward Moore farm in Litchfield, near the city, and will make his Winter home there in the future.

Mrs. Houser, who was formerly Miss Gladys Guptil of this city, has been in Lewiston for a few days and made the purchase. They returned to Boston today and will later go to Philadelphia, where Mr. and Mrs. Houser have made their home. They plan to come here soon at the close of the season and remain at the farm until the time for Spring practice.

PRESIDENT NOYES' FUNERAL TOMORROW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The funeral of Thomas C. Noyes, president of the Washington American club, will take place tomorrow. The game between Washington and Detroit scheduled for Saturday, will be played today in a double-header. The Washington team, headed by Manager Griffith, will attend the funeral.

LIPTON YACHT WITHDRAWN

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Lipton's famous cutter Shamrock has finished its racing career and has been withdrawn from the Torquay Dartmouth regatta owing to bad weather. Another noted yacht, White Heather, has also withdrawn. The twenty-metre class of yachts is abolished at the close of the season.

Big Athletic Meet for Saugus Church

The annual field day of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament will be held at Atwood Park, Saugus, tomorrow. The event promises to be one of the best ever held on these grounds.

There will be enjoyment for all, both young and old, in the following list of sports. Baseball game between Clifton-dale and Saugus Centre, motorcycle race, 200-yard dash, one-mile race, fifty-yard human's race (200 pounds or over), fifty-yard dash for young ladies, fat ladies' race, needle race, potato race, fifty-yard dash for girls, fifty-yard dash for boys, three-legged race for boys, wheelbarrow race, hop and jump, three standing jumps and catching the greased pig.

CYCLE RACERS ON EVEN TERMS

The twenty-five-mile motor paced race scheduled for tomorrow night at the Revere cycle track will allow each other to pass to the front without any argument, and speed will be reserved to fight off opponents as fast they get alongside.

Starting the teams from opposite sides of the track will be to the benefit of Collins and Carman, for the pair are noted fast starters. Both men can jump their wheels quickly and if their pacemakers are on the job they should make a big gain at the start.

Wiley is a fairly quick starter, while Rodell ordinarily has been slow in getting away.

Rodell, however, had something to do with the standing start idea and being a good sprinter in addition to a pace-follower, it is probable that he figures that he can get the jump on his opponents.

The start, however, will have considerable bearing on the distance, for it is the twenty-five miles. If both teams get away on fairly even terms and an effort will be made to see that no one loses the gun, the race should be a grand exhibition of motor-paced pursuit racing.

SULLIVAN IS AFTER 125-POUND BOXERS

"Young" Johnny Sullivan of Somerville has re-entered the ring and is performing in rare form. He is a fast, shifty youngster and can land a stinging wallop with either hand. Sullivan tips the beam at 125 pounds and is open to meet any boy at the Forty-first weight. He would like a fine attraction for any club. He is desirous of getting a date at the Cape Ann A. C. He is managed by Charles Mooney, who is located at Magoun square, Somerville.

COMPLETE CARD FOR PILGRIM A. A. SHOW

The complete card of boxing bouts arranged for the Pilgrim A. A. for Tuesday evening has been announced. Besides the main bout of twelve rounds, bringing together Eddie Murphy and Jack Britton, Tommy Murray, a featherweight from Philadelphia, will box six rounds with Gus Lemay of South Boston; Eddie Flynn and Charlie Byers, lightweights, go six rounds, and in the semi-final Joe Nelson will try to even matters up with Henry Hall.

HORSEMAN DEAD.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Word has been received here of the death at his Summer home at Lake Sunapee, N. H., of Thomas Flynn, well known in racing circles. During the good old days in New Jersey Flynn was a starter at the Gloucester and other tracks and later on was manager for the August Belmont Association, which also conducted a race track.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

The Loneliness of the Great.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

ONE who has become great is very lonely.

"When one's soul has reached the heights," said Daysey Mayme Appleton, "it starves for human companionship. Ah, but I have known what lonesomeness means since writing 'The Sorrows of Eloise.'"

The other women present looked interested. They had never heard of "The Sorrows of Eloise," a book so sad that "thousands of readers," said Daysey Mayme, "are daily swept away by the flood of their own tears."

"Of course you, not being great, can't understand my longing for companionship."

The women gasped. One had written the year's best seller, and another had written a book that contained no hint of the sex question, which ranked her as the most original writer of her time. Others were regular contributors to magazines.

"Not only am I burdened by the fame of my book," continued Daysey Mayme, "but my brow is heavy with the laurels I earned as a book reviewer.

"Did you read my review of Robert W. Chambers' latest works? In it I claim that the touch of delicacy with which he tells a girl she shouldn't wear corsets has never been surpassed. The manner in which he handles delicate subjects like this is just too sweet."

The other women told of what they had written. Daysey Mayme had never heard of their works, she said, and returned to her own book, after the manner of all who have written books.

"My sole regret," she said, "is that my name is so commonplace. There are so many Appletons that I intend hereafter to wear a placard which says: 'I am Daysey Mayme Appleton, the Famous Authoress,' and adorn it with little bells which will ring and attract attention."

The suggestion appeased to the other literary women present. They had found fame of slow growth, even when nurtured in the warm sunshine of Mutual Admiration at a Press club. They, too, would wear placards, and some, with a conviction of Fame Extraordinary, would advertise like the sandwich man.

Daysey Mayme saw that the other writers present were mentally exhausted by trying to reach her height of thought, and took pity.

"Let us," she said, laying aside her Great Fame, "forget who I am, and gossip about the neighbors. It will be like slipping my brain out of a straight front corset into a Mother Hubbard to come down to your plane."

Then the other women, overcome by the conceit of Daysey Mayme (though they were authors themselves), fell out of their seats.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THERE has been a awful lot of talk lately about the folks that are in this graft case going into cells and spending some of the best years of their lives behind them grim, gray walls, George," said the Manicure Lady.

"It would serve them right," said the Head Barber. "The worst in the land ain't none too bad for them."

"But that's the funny part of it," said the Manicure Lady. "The reason I say it, George, is because the old gent brought a rich friend of his up to the house last night, a gent that had happened to violate some Federal law, and had got pinched for it. Of course, in a way of speaking, that made him as much of a convict as some poor devil that had stole a few stamps out of a postoffice or slugged some village postmaster, but you have got no idea, George, how much of prison life this gent that was calling on father told us about. He was kind of rosy-cheeked, middle-aged man, with a deep voice and a happy laugh. There wasn't any of them furtive glances in his eyes, except when he was winking at Sister Maymie or me, and I always thought that a gent which had got out of prison had furtive glances. That's what it says in the short stories about prison life, anyway. Once a convict, always one."

"Well," said the Head Barber, "what about it, anyway?"

"Nothing about it," said the Manicure Lady, "except that this man which father had brought home didn't seem a bit downcast about the terrible years he had spent in the Castle."

"You mean the 'Bastile,'" corrected the Head Barber, reveling in the knowledge that he had "put one over" on the girl at the table.

"I mean a jail, whatever you want to call it," said the Manicure Lady, "and if it is just the same to you, George, I guess there will be no more conversation this forenoon. It is always kind of dreary to talk with one whose soul is not tuned with yours. Go on and hone your razors. Goodness knows they must need it, from the wolfing I heard from your chair this morning. Didn't I hear one of your customers say that after you had shaved him he knew how Mary, Queen of Scots, and Sir Walter Raleigh must have felt when they died? Don't try to kid with a hopeless girl like me, George. I might get the best of the argument. But as I was saying, this cheerful old ex-convict had nothing but the kindest words for the lock-up in which he was locked up in. After he had told all about the different courses they had for every meal, and the fine cigars that he had in his rooms (he called it 'rooms' instead of 'cell,' George) he went on to tell how sweet and trusting the warden was. He said that the warden let him go anywhere except to the next town, which was a dry town, anyhow.

"He must have been smoking, George. By the way, what does 'sugar' mean, when it is used as slang?"

"It means money," replied the Head Barber. "It means money, in the case of your ex-convict friend, that is apt to get special privileges."

"Gee, George!" exclaimed the Manicure Lady, "ain't there nothing except money and graft in the world?"

"I guess not," said the Head Barber. "A man with money can come pretty close to comfort anywhere."

"Even in jail?"

"Yes, even in jail."

"Gee!" exclaimed the Manicure Lady. "Then I guess that even after it is all over, Mister Hocker ought to get along kind of good."

Married Life the Third Year

No. 69.—Helen Meets a Young Englishwoman Eager to Try Her Future in New York

"I KNOW you are very busy, but if before you leave you could find time to look up this young woman, we would be very glad. We know nothing about her except that her father was a great friend of Mr. Stevens' brother Edward when he was in school in England. Of course, she does not know of Edward's death, but we would be very glad to do anything we can for her for his sake.

"Yet unless there was some chance for her success we would not want to encourage her to come. I am inclosing you her letter, but, after all, one can judge very little from that. If you could only see her and have a talk with her we would both appreciate it.

"New York has been fearfully hot these last few days. We have been away only over the week-ends, but hope to have a couple of weeks in the mountains some time in September. With much love,

"EMILY S. STEVENS.

"Wednesday, July 24."

When Helen had reread this last part of Mrs. Stevens' letter she took out again the letter that had been inclosed with it:

"26 Longridge Road, Kensington,
"London. S. W.
July 2, 1912.

"Mr. Edward C. Stevens,
"Care University Club,
"New York City.

"My Dear Mr. Stevens:

"You may remember that you were a classmate of my father, Benjamin B. Turnbull, who died last November. In going through his papers I found some letters from you, dated, of course, many years ago. As I am very anxious to come to New York, am writing to ask you if you think there would be any opening there for a young woman journalist.

"I have done space work, principally musical notes and book reviews, for a number of London papers. Have also written a few fiction stories and sketches for some of the weeklies here. But the pay for any kind of literary work in London is so small that it is almost impossible to make a living in this way.

"If you could give me some idea of the chances for such work in New York I would be most grateful. Very sincerely,

"EDNA M. TURNBULL."

With a thoughtful frown, Helen put the letter back in her hand bag. She was on her way now to look up this young woman. It was always hard for her to meet strangers and she dreaded the interview before her.

"Longridge Road," called out the conductor.

She left the bus, and a few moments' walk brought her to Number 26. It was a dingy brick building with shops under-neath. The entrance, however, was through an inside court, to which some flower beds gave a touch of cheer.

The Meeting

The care-taker informed her that Miss Turnbull's flat was on the fifth floor back. There was no "lift" and Helen was breathless when she had climbed the five flights.

It was several moments before there was an answer to her knock, then the door was opened by a frail looking young woman.

"Miss Turnbull?" inquiringly.

"Yes, won't—won't you step in?" evidently surprised and puzzled.

Helen explained briefly Mrs. Stevens' letter and the cause of her visit.

If Helen felt awkward and embarrassed the girl before her was far more so.

"Oh, I'm afraid I shouldn't have written that letter," she murmured apologetically. "I thought at the time it might seem presumptuous. But I knew Mr. Stevens had been a very good friend of father's, and I was so anxious to go to New York—and I know of no one else there."

Helen, who always formed her opinions quickly, at once liked this young woman. She seemed very direct and earnest.

Gradually Helen got her to talk of her work, and of what she had hoped to do in New York. She had had a small "post" on one of the London dailies, but now she was "free lancing"—writing odd sketches and stories and selling them where she could.

"And you know that's so uncertain—sometimes two or three weeks will go by before I can sell anything. London is overcrowded with journalists—and the London papers pay so little. Surely the chances would be better in New York."

Almost the Same.

"I'm afraid I don't know very much about journalism," answered Helen evasively. "But I do know New York is full of struggling writers."

"Yes, I suppose every large city is," admitted the girl. "But it seems to me no place could be so hopeless as London. Sometimes I average less than a pound a week."

"Oh, then you're not dependent on this work—for you couldn't live on that."

The girl nodded. "Yes, I'm wholly dependent upon it. But one can live very cheaply in London—if you know how. You see, I have only two tiny rooms here. Would you like to see the other one?"

The room in which they were sitting was evidently her workroom. Its scanty furnishings were very plain, but there were a few good pictures and some books. On a stand in the corner stood a typewriter of American make.

The other room, which was even smaller, held a cot, a chest of drawers, a stationary wash stand, a table with a tiny gas stove and a few dishes. A box of crackers and a bottle of milk on the window sill gave an insight to the frugal meals.

"I get my own breakfast here, and I know a little tea room where I can have a good dinner for ninepence. So you see my meals cost very little. These rooms I rent unfurnished for two guineas a month. They are very small, but the neighborhood and the address is good. That's why I'm trying to keep them."

And then, as though fearing she had said too much, that she was seeking to appeal for sympathy, she added quickly:

"But of course, if the worst comes, I can take a position as typist at a pound a week."

Low Wages

"Oh, I hope you won't have to do that," exclaimed Helen. "If you did—surely you could get more than a pound a week."

"No, typists are paid very little in England. Even the best stenographers don't get over two pounds—and I've never studied shorthand. But I'm very fast on the typewriter. I thought if I should go to New York and couldn't get work on the papers or magazines at the start—at least I could get a position as typist and make more than I could here."

"Oh, yes, if you'd be willing to start that way. But wouldn't that be very hard on you. Have you ever typed all day in an office?"

"No, but I know I could. I've typed on my manuscripts here all day and sometimes far into the night. Oh," excitedly, "if I could only get to New York, I feel sure I could do something. I've been planning this for over a year, but somehow I haven't had the courage to start. It's so hard to go to a new country all alone."

"That is hard," said Helen sympathetically. "It would take more courage than I'd have. But if you should come, both the Stevenses and my husband and I will do all we can to help you. Between us we could surely get you a position as typist. But the literary work—I'm afraid we couldn't help you much with that."

"Oh, I know," eagerly, "that work must stand on its own merits. And I suppose everyone that tries to write believes in their ability. But I feel so sure that I can write and that in the end I will make a success of it."

Helen could not help but be imbued with some of her enthusiasm. And when finally she left it was with the promise that she would call again before they sailed.

That evening she talked it over with Warren. She had really liked the girl and had been much impressed with her earnestness and her willingness to work at anything, if only she might have a start. But Warren was most unsympathetic.

Warren's Advice

"She'd much better stay where she is," he declared. "They all hear these inflated stories about the big money to be made in New York. Nine chances out of ten they'd be much worse off. As for her thinking she can break into the literary game over there—well, she'll find it jolly hard, that's all."

"But, dear, she's willing to start as a typist. She may have to do that here—and surely she could get more money in New York."

"She might, and she might not. There's plenty of stenographers there out of a job. The commercial schools turn them out by the thousands—girls that are glad to get six dollars a week or even less for a start. Most of 'em pretty good, too."

"But, Warren, she's much more intelligent than a girl just out of school."

"Maybe she is, but you say she doesn't know shorthand—that's a big handicap. Then it would cost her twice as much to live. Now you take my advice and don't encourage her in any fool notions about New York. She'd better stay in her own country where she knows the ropes."

But Helen was not convinced. She felt this girl was in earnest, and that given a chance, she would succeed. Surely with her intelligence and willingness to work she could make her way in New York. So, in spite of Warren's advice, she determined to encourage and help her.

How Very Sad

SEATED at little tables in an old-fashioned coffee house were a number of honest workingmen, partaking of their humble dinner.

Presently there entered a poor, bedraggled woman who was bitterly weeping and who looked the picture of misery.

"My dear little Nellie," she sobbed; "she's just been run over and killed."

They were only hard-working mill hands, but their hearts were touched, and soon the hat was being passed round among them for the benefit of the afflicted woman.

"And how old was she?" asked one of the sympathizers.

"Five years," came the answer; "and I'd had her ever since she was a kitten."

PART I.—(Continued)

"YOU find me at work," he remarked. "I don't suppose you understand any but your own?"

"If you mean to ask if I understand what you're trying to do there, I'm free to say that I don't. I couldn't tell how off hand, whether it's an airship you're planning, a hydraulic machine or—or"—He stopped, with a laugh and turned towards the bookshelves. "Now here's what I like. These books just rake my eye."

"Look at them, then. I like to see a man interested in books. Only, I thought if you knew how to handle wire, I would get you to hold this end while I work with the other."

"I guess I know enough for that," was Sweetwater's gay rejoiner. But when he felt that commiserating wire in his hand and experienced for the first time the influence of the other's eye, it took all his hardihood to hid the hypnotic thrill it gave him. Though he smiled and chatted, he could not help asking himself between whiles what had killed the poor washerwoman across the court, and what had killed Miss Challoner. Something visible or something invisible? Something which gave warning of attack, or something which struck in silence? He found himself gazing long and earnestly at this man's hand, and wondering if death lay under it. It was a strong hand, a deft, clean-cut member, formed to respond to the slightest hint from the powerful brain controlling it. But was this its whole story? Had he said all when he had said this?

Eager to Please.

Fascinated by the question, Sweetwater died a hundred deaths in his awakened fancy, as he followed the sharp, short instructions which fell with cool precision from the other's lips. A hundred deaths, I say, but with no betrayal of his folly. The anxiety he showed was that of one eager to please, which may explain why on the conclusion of his task Mr. Brotherson gave him one of his infrequent smiles and remarked, as he buried the model under its cover, "You're handy and you're quiet at your job. Who knows but that I shall want you again? Will you come in if I call you?"

"Won't I?" was the gay retort, as the detective, thus released, stooped for the book still lying on the floor. "Pinsko and Francesca," he read from the back, as he laid it on the table. "Poetry?" he queried.

"Ret," scornfully returned the other, as he moved to take down a bottle and some glasses from a cupboard let into another portion of the wall.

Sweetwater, taking advantage of the moment, sidled toward the shelf where that empty space still gaped with the tell-tale hole at the back. He could easily have replaced the missing book before Mr. Brotherson noticed. But the issue was too direct for that. He was dealing with no absent-minded fool, and it behooved him to avoid, above all things, calling attention to the book or to the place on the shelf where it belonged.

But there was one thing he could do and did. Reaching out a finger as deft as Brotherson's own, he pushed a second volume into the place of the one that was gone. This veiled the upper hole completely; a fact which so entirely relieved his mind that his old smile came back like sunshine to his lips, and it was only by a distinct effort that he kept the dancing humor from his eyes as he prepared to refuse the glass which Brotherson now brought forward.

"None of that!" said he. "You mustn't tempt me. The doctor has shut down on all kinds of spirit for two months at least. But don't let me hinder you. I can bear to smell the stuff. My turn will come again some day."

But Brotherson did not drink. Setting down the glass he carried, he took up the book lying near, weighed it in his hand and laid it down again, with an air of thoughtful inquiry. Then he suddenly pushed it toward Sweetwater. "Did you want it?" he asked.

Sweetwater was too taken aback to answer immediately. This was a move he did not understand. Want it, he? What he wanted was to see it put back in its place on the shelf. Did Brotherson suspect this? The supposition was incredible; yet who could read a mind so impenetrable?

Sweetwater, debating the subject, decided that the risk of adding to any such possible suspicion was less to be dreaded than the continued unrest offered by that unoccupied space so near the hole which testified so unmistakably of the means he had taken to spy upon this suspected man's privacy. So, after a moment of awkward silence, not out of keeping with the character he had assumed, he calmly refused the present as he had the glass.

Unhappily he was not rewarded by seeing the despised volume restored to its shelf. It still lay where its owner had pushed it, when, with some awkwardly muttered thanks, the discomfited detective withdrew to his own room.

Early morning saw Sweetwater peering into the depths of his closet. The hole was hardly visible. This meant that the book he had pushed across it from the other side had not been removed.

Greatly reassured by the sight, he awaited his opportunity, and as soon as a suitable one presented itself prepared the hole for inspection by breaking away its edges and imprinting it well with plaster and old dirt. This done, he left matters to arrange themselves, which they did after this manner:

Mr. Brotherson suddenly developed a great need of him, and it became a common thing for him to spend the half and sometimes the whole of the evening in the neighboring room. This was just what he had worked for, and his constant interference with the man whose secret he sought to surprise should have borne fruit. But it did not. Nothing in the eager but painstaking inventor showed a distracted mind for a heavily burdened soul. Indeed, he was so calm in all his ways, so precise and self-contained, that Sweetwater often wondered what had become of the fiery agitator and eloquent propagandist of new and startling doctrines.

The Widow With Three Proposals

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Why did you love him? Curious fool! be still—
Is human love the growth of human will?"
——Lord Byron.

A WIDOW, whose heart is just as warm and as full of love as if this were her first sojourn in the Kingdom of love, writes:

"I am a young widow, with one child. I have a nice little home and a good business, and I also get a small monthly allowance from my father, which I am to get as long as I live. I am a pleasure-loving woman, and, as all my relatives live far away, I have to depend upon men's society for amusement.

"Among my friends are three men for whom I feel more than friendship. One of thirty-three, a business man, a good, honest, upright man, who asks me to marry him; who loves me and loves my child, and would be a good father to it. I have asked him to wait a year. He says if I don't marry him this month he will go away.

"No. 2 is a playwright and violin player. He loves me, but he does not love children, and would make a poor father for my child. He says if I refuse to marry him he will remain my friend, providing I marry no one else.

"No. 3 is the man I love. He likes me only as a friend, and I could not marry him because of his youth, even if he wanted me to.

"But I would be willing to give up the others and just be friends with him all through life. I am not at all good looking."

Let us look these three candidates over as carefully as if they were pumkins on the market.

No. 1 is a good, honest, upright business man; loves the mother and also loves the child. Yet she passes him by.

No. 2 does not love children. Somehow, this woman loses a little of the lustre of maternity in putting his name on the list. She also exposes herself to the suspicion of having little sense. For he says he will still be friends with her though she refuses to marry him, "providing she marries no one else."

No. 3 is too young for her to marry. Then, I contend, he is also too young for her to love. Such a friendship as she dreams of with him will be fatal to her.

My advice would be that she take No. 1 and thank a kind Providence for sending such a man.

NEWSPAPERS is funny things, ain't they, sed Ma. One day I say say one thing & the next day they say the saim thing.

"You dount say so, sed Pa. One day they say the saim thing as they sed the day beefor. It all must be vary distreasing to Mayor Gaynor, sed Pa. You see, Pa sed, Mister Gaynor wud be more in favor of a press thar was all the time differing itself, the way he is. Thare is one grand old man, no use talking. Sometimes I think he is more than human. At least, sed Pa, thare is sumthing about him that a human can't dope out. The letters be rites, I mean, etc.

What I was going to say, speeking about newspapers, sed Ma, was that I read a peece the other day that sed Mister Burdea Junioor was sick of Newport beekaus thare was so many common peepul thare He sed that all the Four Hundred was going to California, sed Ma.

He did, did he, sed Pa. My goodness! You dount mean to tell me that all the Four Hundred is going to the other coast & leeve the butchers & grocers dat? Three thousand miles is a long ways, sed Pa, & besides thare aint many good lawyers on the Pacific Slope. They dount need so many lawyers out thare. By the way, sed Pa, who in—is Mister Burden Junioor? There is sumthing about the naim that show sum sense.

Doan't cry about it, sed Ma, & doan't have apoplexy, as I have often tould you beefoar. What in the world do I care about Burden Junior or any other member of the Four Hundred? & how do they know that anybody wants them out in California? Them Native Sons is kind of touchy about the kind of folks they receeve into thare arms, Ma sed. I think the Four Hundred ought to rite four hundred letters beefoar they park thare grips & move West.

Wife, sed Pa, thare are times that you sounds like a man with a load, sed Pa. I trust that he had a load when he made that idiotic reemark, sed Pa.

You dount need to burn up about it, sed Ma. I dident mean to start anything.

I always burn up, sed Pa, wen I see or hear anything about a bunch of nuts talking about common people. Who are common people anyway? sed Pa. Abraham Lincoln, Napoleon, Socrates, Aesop, Oliver Cromwell—dat is the kind of common peepul that Mister Burden Junioor is talking about. Men that had big brains, big hands, big hearts big bodies. Bless them, Pa sed, they had more brains under thare finger nails than all the Juniors in the world. The wise guys in this world dount want any advice from Juniors, sed Pa. TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS AND ALL THE LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock Markets Start with a Stronger Tone

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Aug. 23.—Midday: The Boston market ruled steady at the start and became quiet and strong during the morning. North Butte, Butte & Superior, Calumet & Arizona, Utah Copper, Nevada Consolidated and Santa Fe sold higher. Calumet & Hecla advanced 7 points during the first hour.

Among coppers which receded were Isle Royale, Mayflower and Shannon. American Telephone declined.

Sales of Alaska Gold Mines Company stock, when and if issued, are reported this morning at 7. The market is now 6½ to 7.

Copper exports for the week ending yesterday increased 2,253 tons by comparison.

Thompson, Towle & Company say that July earnings of the St. Paul road will be found highly satisfactory, that they understand that in Pittsburgh Coal financing preferred shareholders will be offered $143

A Safe Investment

Fall Suits are not wanted in August, but cold weather will come very soon and the man that takes advantage of the great Fall and Winter sale of the Harrison wholesale stock carried over from last season will reap the benefit of saving just one-half in the purchase of a Fall or Winter suit. Come today or any day—1100 Fall suits at exactly half former prices—street floor. S. H. Harrison Co., 666 to 672 Washington St., corner Beach.

market yesterday, but that the amounts disposed of were not large. Most of the cablegrams were inquiries. Big orders are expected to follow. There were no concessions, it is understood, from the price of 17¾ cents a pound. In fact, the price is said to be firmer than ever and much more likely to advance than to recede. August sales have not totalled as much as those for July, but the producers are all sold up. For several months the bulk of the copper sold in this market has been for domestic consumption.

Financial News in Brief.

Russians have placed a large order for American tools and machinery with the Pratt & Whitney Company of Hartford, Conn.

Minor C. Keith, back in New York from a trip to Central America, says the International Railways Company, of which he is president, has acquired the entire railroad system of that region. A great boom is looked for there when the Panama Canal is opened. The American construction now owns the Guatemala Central, the Occidental and the Ocus roads, and within twelve months others will be constructed through Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua, Salvador and Guatemala, connecting those countries with Mexico and the United States.

Newman Erb says his negotiations for control of the Moffat road have reached a point where he is practically certain the arrangement will be consummated. He reports that business in the West is good and that farmers along the lines of the Minneapolis and St. Louis bought $2,000,000 more goods during the six weeks ending with August 15 than they did during the corresponding period last year.

It is estimated that earnings upon its capital stock of Standard Oil of New York are at the rate of between $13,000,000 and $15,000,000 per annum, and Wall street understands that the capital will be increased soon from $15,000,000 to $50,000,000.

The heavy selling of some railroad stocks yesterday was attributed to the conviction on the part of traders that President Taft would sign the Panama Canal bill and that certain transcontinental lines would suffer through competition. But this did not account for weakness of other railway issues. One explanation of the market decline was: "The attack was based on technical conditions. The short interest has been pretty well eliminated on the recent rise, and in the absence of public support prices seemed to respond more easily to manipulation for the decline than for the rise. The so-called "outside element" had recently been buying on recessions. On more low prices of yesterday it again made its appearance, and its influence was partly responsible for the slight rally in some of the stocks in the late trading."

Baltimore & Ohio's net earnings for July showed a gain of only $146,712. There would have been a far better showing had it not been for an increase in operating expenses due to washouts and other Providential visitations which were unexpected and not likely to be recurrent.

Wall Street has again heard the rumor that George W. Perkins will resign as an International Harvester Company director.

It is said that the London demand for American securities has turned from high-grade bonds to issues which yield more income. The higher cost of living is being felt in England as well as in this country. That English investors, who are superficially conservative, should make such a shift is eloquent confidence in the future prosperity of the United States. The country has great resources and riches, and also very few really serious troubles, when compared with Europe.

Charles A. Stoneham & Co. say a stock tape is being cut at the 700-foot level of the Zack shaft on the Cliff consolidated, and as soon as completed a crosscut will be sent out south for the ore shoot opened up on the higher levels. Sloping of ore on the 500 and 600-foot levels is to be started just as soon as the Pendroy Lead can satisfactorily arrange freight rates to the Salt Lake Valley smelters.

MOTHER FINDS RUTH MORRILL

Thirteen-year-old Ruth Morrill, who disappeared Monday night, leaving a note saying that she was going to commit suicide, is with her mother today at their home, No. 12 Pullen street, Back Bay, after having been brought back from Haverhill, where she was found working in a restaurant under the name of Bessie Gilchrist. Ruth disappeared after she had been sent to her home in Boston from the Deaconess Fresh Air Home in Haverhill for minor infractions of the rules of that institution.

Today Mrs. Morrill, Ruth's mother, declared she would demand an explanation from the authorities at the home of the reason why Ruth and her five-year-old brother, Dick, were placed aboard a trolley at Haverhill and sent to Boston alone.

BOSTON CREDIT MEN ELECTED TO OFFICES

At the eighth annual (August) convention of the National Association of Mercantile Agencies, held at Spokane, Washington, W. S. Radway, general manager of the Credit Reporting Company of New England, was chosen vice-president.

One of the important transactions of "Conservation Week" was the formation of the National Association of Retail Credit Men; and in this Boston was honored by the selection, as one of the Board of Directors, of Sidney E. Blandford of the R. H. White Company, and also of the Board of Directors of the Credit Reporting Company of New England.

TRAMPS BLAMED FOR WOBURN BARN FIRE

An unoccupied barn on Floyd street, Woburn, owned by Louis Sheiders of Boston, was destroyed by fire early today and the house nearby slightly damaged. The loss is $1,000. It is believed tramps started the fire.

PROPERTY OWNER FINED.

Mrs. Aibletis Piawoks, a well-to-do Polish woman of South Boston, was fined $10 in the South Boston Court today on charges by Inspectors Egan and Keenan of the Board of Health that she had repeatedly failed to improve the conditions at her property at Nos. 88 and 90 H street, South Boston.

Shall America or England Control an American Canal?

That Is the Question for Mr. Taft and Congress to Decide—Temporarily. It Is a Question That the American People Will Decide Eventually. And There Is No Doubt What the Decision Will Be.

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

The people of this country built a canal, and paid for the building of it. Officers of the American army planned and managed the work. It is successful.

The building of this canal will save hundreds of millions of dollars in transportation expense to all the nations of the world.

Whatever we may charge foreign ships for the use of the canal, within reason, foreign countries and foreign shipping will still benefit by hundreds of millions because of American energy.

We have cut the trip from the East to the West in two.

We have put a lane of water in the middle of the American continent.

We have multiplied by three the efficiency of thousands of ships of all nations.

In part payment for the work that we have done for THE WHOLE WORLD, and as recognition of American enterprise and expenditure, we very modestly demand that our own ships, THE SHIPS of THE NATION THAT BUILT THE CANAL, shall be permitted to use the canal without charge.

Considering the size of our merchant marine, that is a very modest payment for the work that we have done.

But big or little, that is the payment which the United States proposes to have and will take.

The Democrats in our House of Representatives, influenced by foolish newspapers, and apparently free from any patriotic impulse, have denied to all except American coastwise vessels the right to use the canal free.

The people of America will not endure this stupidity.

Mr. Taft should veto the bill that would regulate the use of the Canal on an English basis, and give the people an opportunity to make themselves heard.

He must know that the ships of the nation that built the canal, have the right to USE the canal.

The only protest comes from England—France, Germany and the other countries do not protest.

Even Japan, more deeply interested in proportion to her size than any other nation, makes no protest against our allowing our own ships TO USE OUR OWN CANAL.

Those that are representing English interests and assisting the English to uphold their preposterous plan for managing an American canal, allege that a treaty stands in the way of allowing our ships free use of the canal.

The treaty does nothing of the kind.

The treaty says that all ships of all nations shall be treated alike in the use of the canal.

THAT MEANS, OF COURSE, ALL THE SHIPS OF ALL THE NATIONS THAT DID NOT BUILD THE CANAL.

The agreement does not apply to the ships of our own country, to the ships owned by the nation that paid for the canal.

The dullest Englishman, and the ten thousand times duller newspaper editors here in America who represent English interests, must understand that this country can, if it chooses, give free use of the canal to American ships.

All that we need do is to give to those American ships that go through that canal A SUBSIDY EQUAL TO THE AMOUNT OF THE CANAL TOLLS THEY PAY. Then we can charge our own ships the same as other ships, and yet have the canal free to our own ships. We can take toll from our ships at one end of the canal and pass back the toll at the other end.

And no nation would or could object to that, inasmuch as every nation of importance has some scheme of ship subsidy.

The English invested their money—thanks to the intelligence of the Jewish Prime Minister, Disraeli, in the securities of the Suez Canal.

Disraeli, more intelligent financially even than the Rothschilds, who refused to buy the canal securities, enabled England to make millions every year in profits on the Suez investment.

And England gives back to English ships in the form of subsidy every dollar that the English ships pay when they go through the Suez Canal.

The dullest Englishman, the stupidest American editor, surely can understand that what England does with English ships going through the Suez Canal—which England does not own—America can do for American ships going through the Panama Canal, which America DOES own.

Our ships are going through FREE one way or the other.

What is the use of having hypocritical pretense?

Why not assert our rights and maintain them?

We own the territory through which the canal passes. We built the canal with our own money—hundreds of millions of American dollars—for the benefit of the whole world.

Only a fool or an ignoramus would suggest that the nation spending the hundreds of millions should not be permitted to give special privileges to its own ships.

If we permit England to regulate the management of the canal in

The Utilization of Vacant Lots for the Benefit of the Very Poor

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1912, by the International News Service

HAVE you ever seen a little child, born and reared in a tenement house?

Do you realize how many such children exist in our great cities and how they are living under an unnatural conditions as plants growing in a cellar?

Have you ever wondered as you went about the big cities, and saw acres and acres of unused land, right within the city limits, to whom this land belonged?

And why it was idle?

Some of our billionaires became billionaires because this land was allowed to lie vacant without being taxed to any extent, until it rose to a fabulous price, through the growth of the city.

Now it has come to the minds of good people that many of these vacant lots might be utilized for the benefit of the very poor who have no privileges of sunlight and fresh air, and that the little children growing up in our great cities might be helped by some cooperative efforts along these paths of procedure.

The International Children's School Farm League is one of the results of these ideas.

Here is its declaration of purpose: "To Promote and Unify a World-wide Interest in Children's Gardens."

Seven Ways It Will Create Interest in Children's Gardens.

By assisting starting children's gardens in suitable parks and vacant lots.

By assisting in starting gardens in connection with schools, until Boards of Education become convinced of their value and take over their maintenance.

By assisting in starting gardens in connection with hospitals and institutions for children who are mentally or physically weak or deficient.

By urging the employment of teachers trained for children's garden work.

By establishing a training school for such teachers.

By exhibiting models and pictures of the work for the information of the public.

By maintaining a bureau of information and advice on how to start and conduct children's gardens; furnishing lectures, printed matter, photographs and lantern slides.

No matter how large or small the number, each child has his or her own garden, on which he or she does all the work. A new interest and sense of responsibility comes with ownership, arousing the forces of ambition, and developing at once the need of property protection. Often it is their first understanding of the right of property owners, and this awakening of the civic sense of protection is to have a tremendous influence.

They spread fertiliser, spade, rake, plant, hoe, water, weed and harvest. Worthy work well done is always dignified, and the worker dignifies it. The child must be shown how to do his work well, arouse his labor saving intelligence, and open his mind to the forces of the elements that are serving his intelligent activity, and he will never question the dignity of labor that arouses intelligence and that fills him with pride over the product.

Children Will Learn the Larger Problems of the Nation.

Children's gardens conducted on this plan have spaces reserved for varieties of products grown throughout the country, so bringing the children to the larger problems of the nation.

There is much work to be done in the garden outside of the child's plot. Just as every community has public works that must be attended to, so the children must contribute their services to the general welfare of the whole garden. And in this work they learn of broom corn, flax, wheat, cotton and other wonderful plants that are so important to the world.

To preserve the neatness of the garden the children are taught to gather stones and trash, load wheelbarrows and wheel them away. In doing this, and in keeping in order the paths over which the loads must be wheeled, they learn in simple, effective manner to think about one of the greatest aids to civilization—transportation. The way in which the question of good roads can be brought to children in a garden will make them think more and more of the fact that "all production is transportation," and that as all material production is the result of moving things, so all material wealth is the result of moving things economically, that they may be worth more after they are moved than they were before.

The widespread use of gardens in the education of children will be a tremendous force in hastening the people to a better use of the land. For all the people must know something about the subject to intelligently elect representatives who are to act for them in public matters, and to respond when action is taken.

To Develop in Children Courage to Grasp Opportunities.

The wellbeing of a nation is not to be measured by total figures of wealth, but by the number of individuals who are doing well. The spread of children's gardens is to be a tremendous force for this individual wellbeing throughout the land.

In an address given a few months ago the secretary of the league said:

"We have proved that the school garden is a valuable addition to every part of the curriculum. It is an inspiration to expression and language, a stimulant to study, and furnishes material and illustration for every subject.

"Unto him who hath shall be given." Our land offers great opportunities. It is for us to develop in the children the courage to grasp these opportunities and the ability to use them. Visit properly conducted children's gardens and you will see before your eyes the awakening of individual resourcefulness, self-dependence, forceful thrift, activity for community welfare. You will see a joy in work that lightens labor. You will see children gaining a knowledge of sunlight and fresh air that will affect their future living and housing. You will see them learning many useful things in a way that will affect the methods of future instruction. You will see them instinctively developing the traits of good citizenship. It is not high walls, strong locks, or severe laws that best protect. It is by each individual knowing how closely his personal well being is bound up with all. All the good things we desire for our land must come through knowledge and understanding. All the knowledge and understanding to be gained in the garden is of the fundamental things of life.

Shall America or England Control an American Canal?

time of peace, we shall be having England or some other nation pretending to regulate the canal in time of war.

If we admit that England has the right to interfere with the free use of the canal by American ships, the next step will be to admit that Japan or some other nation has the right to interfere with American fortification of the canal in case of war.

It is OUR canal. We built it, PAID for it, OWN it.

We are going in accordance with our treaty to manage the canal in such a way as to put all the ships of all the other nations on an equal footing.

But we are going to have our OWN ships on the only sensible footing—WITH THE RIGHT TO USE THE AMERICAN CANAL, WITHOUT CHARGE, SINCE IT WAS BUILT BY AMERICAN MONEY.

Any Congressman who votes against this proposition lacks intelligence.

Any American who thinks that American citizens have no right to profit by American enterprise and the expenditure of American taxes, is a foolish individual.

Mr. Taft should veto the unpatriotic canal bill as amended by the dull minded Democrats in the House of Representatives, and give the people a chance to express THEIR opinion in regard to the matter.

Better close the canal entirely, refuse to open it at all, than admit that American enterprise must be managed by England, and controlled by English opinion.

If we DID REFUSE TO OPEN THE CANAL, we should have the English and all other nations begging us to open it on our own terms—because of the vast profits it means to them.

No weak-backed Democrats should be allowed to interfere with American control of American property.

A Great Emperor

Mutsuhito, the Late Ruler of Japan, Brought About Many Reforms as the "Kaiser of the East"

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

THE late Emperor of Japan has been called the Kaiser of the East. The story of Japan during his reign is the story of a country that has become modernized at a remarkably rapid rate. A few years ago Japan was a land of feudalism; today it stands for all that is included under up-to-date civilization.

The Emperor Mutsuhito was called to the throne when he was fifteen years of age, in February, 1867. Before Mutsuhito's time the Emperors of Japan were figureheads. In 1889 he brought about the end of the absolute monarchy, and gave to his people a constitution. Thus, he became a ruler in the truest sense.

One of the first forward steps of the Emperor was to grant audience to the ambassadors of foreign nations. This had never before been done.

Next, he undertook to bring his country into a single unit of political strength. The two provinces of Japan were united, and Tokio was made the capital. This was not accomplished by merely raising the royal hand and saying, "let it be done." It created a rebellion, and the Emperor's enemies were powerful. But he skilfully brought order out of confusion, and instead of beheading those who had opposed him Mutsuhito promoted many of them to offices of responsibility.

Educational Reforms

With these preliminary steps taken, the Emperor sent representatives to all foreign courts, and established consulates. Then the material welfare of the country began to take its place. Where once only feudal rights were recognized men began to think in terms of telephones, dockyards, modern transportation, telegraph, electric power and the like. Large numbers of Japanese were sent to foreign countries to get the new learning and bring it back to Japan. Institutions for educational purposes were increased at home, and tolerance toward all religions creeds was established.

Even with all this accomplished, there was still much to be done. The Emperor is not subject to the laws of marriage, but this did not throw his mind out of focus. His wife, the first Empress of Japan, was his confidante and companion. They lived a life of mutual interest in a great question; the development of their people. Instead of taking her meals in the back room, the Empress went to the table of her husband to exchange ideas with him. This means that women in Japan have a chance. It also shows that to change conditions through the whole social structure one must begin at the top.

That pitiful old rascal, Abdul Hamid, with his suspicion and his harem, missed it by a whole lifetime. So did all his people.

The National Defense

It soon became necessary to give strict business attention to the subject of national defense; that is, to a competent army and navy, big enough and well equipped. In political circles there was disagreement on the question. Mutsuhito examined the matter for himself. The proposition was extensive and expensive. He looked around for the necessary funds to pay the bills. The result was the announcement that "from this day, and for six years, the household expenses of the Emperor will be reduced so that Three Hundred Thousand Yen may be contributed annually towards the national defense." In the course of time the Russians arose to a point of order, and Japan replied.

Born in 1852, the Emperor's sixtieth birthday would have fallen on November 3 of this year. In forty-five of these sixty years a new nation has emerged; has come forth for the people to take its place with other progressives.

Japan seems to have gone into business with the motto: "Begin and keep going."

Sometimes we are inspired by the biography of a man. We begin to see that other men's struggles indicate that, by struggling, we, too, can come out into the light. We can learn the same from the biography of a nation. Too many men from forty to fifty let go of the progressive life and slip back into the absolute monarchy of let it go. There are no return passports from that country.

Neither Emperors nor other wide-awake thinking men ever wear out the easy chairs of the palace. The Abdul Hamids do that. Out of this difference springs a good many conditions. When Mutsuhito had quelled a rebellion he offered the ringleaders places of trust in office. When Abdul caught an enemy he gave the royal nod and the gentleman was dropped into the Bosphorus.

The Moral in Business

It is the same in business. The real man moves on and forgets his enemies. The others forget everything else.

Thus the Emperor became a great world-figure. He set an ideal for his people to be pursued long after he is gone. An ideal is a sort of never-maturing bond. You can cash your coupons regularly, but the principal must always be deferred or you go out of business.

When the pinch comes, cut down household expenses and set the Yen aside for your proper defense.
